Truman Acts To Head Off East Coast Dock Strike

Taft-Hartley Act Invoked; Inquiry Board Appointed; Injunction Next

President Truman last night invoked the restraining powers of the Taft-Hartley Act to head off an East Coast dock strike threatened for Saturday midnight.

The President brought the dock dispute within the scope of the labor law by labeling it officially a threat to the national health and safety.

He appointed a three-man board, as required by the act, to investigate the deadlock and report to him not later than Friday.

Way for Injunction

That cleared the way for him to ask the Federal courts for an 80-day anti-strike injunction as soon as the board reports.

The controversy, involving the AFL International Longshoremen's Association and a group of steamship operators serving North Atlantic ports from Virginia to Maine, threatened to tie up foreign and domestic shipping along the entire Northeastern coast.

The union's wage contract expires at midnight Saturday, and leaders said the membership, including stevedores, marine carpenters and other dock workers, would walk out at that time if their demands were not granted.

Ching Notifies President

The dispute was turned over to the White House a few hours earlier by Federal Mediation Director Cyrus Ching, who notified the President that he saw no hope of effecting a peaceful settlement before the strike deadline.

Mr. Truman said the fact-finding board would comprise Saul Wallen of Boston, former chairman of the regional War Labor Board, Joseph Miller of Washington, a labor relations consultant, and Julius Cass, a New York attorney.

The Federal Mediation Service had been working for several weeks in a vain effort to patch up the dispute, which centered primarily on overtime pay. The Mediation Service believes, Ching said, that the entire controversy could be settled peaceably if the overtime question were resolved.

Ching declared the overtime question is complicated by a recent Supreme Court decision that overtime pay for night work must be included in the base pay when figuring overtime in excess of 40 hours a week.

The shippers contend this amounts to payment of overtime on overtime.

UAW Calls Strike Of Harvester Workers

Chicago, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—The United Auto Workers (CIO) called 24,000 International Harvester Co. workers out on strike today, and negotiations between the union and the farm equipment firm collapsed.

The union called the walkout in a sudden reversal of orders after it

Woman's Will To Pay for Things Town Can't Afford

Philadelphia, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Perryopolis, Pa., is going to get the street lights it has never been able to afford.

Thanks to the late Mrs. Mary Fuller Frazier, the western Pennsylvania mining community also will get a high school stadium, a library, newly paved streets and refurbished school buildings.

Mrs. Frazier left all but $210,000 of her estate of several millions to the 1300 residents of Perryopolis. How much the village will inherit will not be known until an inventory is completed.

She wanted it used for public improvements.

In 1918 she inherited $1,350,102 in personal property and a large share of $7,000,000 in real estate from her uncle, Alfred M. Fuller of Perryopolis.

Truman May Barnstorm Through South

President Considers October Tour After Legion Convention

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman has under consideration a barnstorming trip that will take him through the heart of the Deep South.

It may come after the American Legion convention in Miami, October 18-21. Mr. Truman, a Legionnaire himself, has been invited to this, but has not yet accepted.

If he does go to Miami, his political associates expect he will leave there on his campaign train, and follow a zig-zag route through the Dixiecrat country, making rear-platform speeches along the way.

It would not surprise them if Mr. Truman went into South Carolina, home of Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, the States' Rights (Dixiecrat) nominee for President.

These associates believe that, despite the uproar over civil rights, the Chief Executive would be given a gracious reception, in keeping with the South's tradition of hospitality.

Mr. Truman is in the extraordinary position this year of battling three rivals for the Presidency—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican nominee; Henry Wallace, the Progressive nominee, and Governor Thurmond.

He is going to take on Governor Dewey and the GOP first.

The White House announced yesterday the President will make six speeches in all when he goes to Michigan on Labor Day, the principal one in Detroit.

On the way to Detroit, he will speak at Grand Rapids, home town of Senator Arthur Vandenberg, and then at Lansing. He will leave his train at Grand Rapids to speak in the Public Square. At Lansing, he will speak from the rear platform of his campaign train.

He is scheduled to arrive in Detroit at noon, and will address an AFL-CIO rally at 12:30 p. m.

Thereafter he will make

Sheriff's Deputies Keep Visitors Away; Court Tangle Seen

Frank C. Littleton kept lonely, secret vigil yesterday at his Oak Hill estate near Leesburg, Va., once the home of President James Monroe, and now headed for public auction September 2.

The advertised public inspection to precede the auction, in line with a Federal Court order for the sale, was at a standstill. The gate of the main entrance was chained and locked.

Deputies from the office of Loudoun County Sheriff S. P. Alexander were sent from Leesburg, and through the afternoon they kept close watch at the gate. There they cautioned reporters and other visitors to go no nearer the mansion some 200 yards away.

Littleton kept out of sight. He was believed to be alone in the columned, yellow brick mansion where President Monroe went to live after he left the White House. That Littleton was in the house was confirmed by a telephone call. He was invited to discuss the forthcoming auction, and the keeping out of the public. "I don't wish to discuss this over the telephone with anyone I don't know," Littleton said. "I don't know who you are." With that he hung up.

Sale of the 1725-acre estate was ordered by the Federal Court for the Eastern District of Virginia to settle the Littleton bankruptcy which has been pending about seven years. In the public advertisement of the sale, inspection dates for prospective buyers were set for last Saturday, Monday and today. Other dates were August 24, 25, 26, 28 and September 1.

According to Sheriff Alexander, on Saturday a crowd estimated at up to 100 persons visited the es-

Halleck Claims GOP Congress Saved Billions

But Barkley Declares It Spent 1½ Billion Beyond Truman Budget

By The Associated Press

Democratic and Republican spokesmen dueled with adding machines yesterday over the record of the Eightieth Congress.

House Republican Leader Halleck of Indiana claimed his party saved more than six billion dollars in the year and a half that Republicans have held a majority in both houses. In the second session alone, Halleck said, they appropriated $2,741,481,291 less than President Truman requested in the regular departmental appropriation bills, deficiencies, supplementals and so on.

Not so, said Senator Barkley of Kentucky, minority leader in the Senate and President Truman's running mate on the Democratic ticket.

Barkley said the Republican-controled Congress appropriated and authorized Federal expenditures amounting to half a billion dollars more than Mr. Truman's original 1948-1949 fiscal budget.

Both Halleck and Barkley inserted their claims in today's post-session issue of the congressional record. Halleck's copy ran 32 typewritten pages. Barkley's was shorter, but contained more figures. They were made public by each party's national committee.

Halleck said the Republican-claimed six billion dollars of savings was achieved over "reckless and sometimes demagogic resistance."

"And," he added, 'this does not include the rejection of the President's 20-billion-dollar high-living, vote-luring political recommendations."

Barkley contended that Congress actually pared the Administration's spending requests during the second and the extra sessions of the Eightieth Congress by $1,309,000,000. More than offsetting this he said supplemental appropriations and authorizations amounting

Globemaster Sets Pace for Airlift Load

Carries in 25 Tons, Showing Russians How Berlin Freight May Be Increased

Berlin, Aug. 17 (AP).—The United States Air Force demonstrated to the Russians today it can expand the blockade-busting air lifeline to Berlin to far greater limits.

A C-74 Globemaster, loaded with 25 tons of flour, landed at the British Gatow Airfield in a test flight. It was the biggest plane ever to land in Berlin and is capable of carrying almost four times the load of the C-54s now bearing the brunt of the supply operation.

Officials said they did not know whether the 12 Globemasters now in Air Force service would be brought here.

It landed with ease at Gatow. Air Force officials said it also could be brought into Tempelhof, the American field, but conditions there are not ideal because Tempelhof is in the heart of Berlin and approaches are more difficult.

After the Globemaster returns to Frankfurt, it will fly to Berlin again Wednesday with "bulky pieces of engineering equipment."

For New Airfield

It was thought the machinery, too bulky to be hauled by smaller planes, was intended for use in building the new airfield at Tegel in the French sector of Berlin.

American officers have said they were handicapped there by lack of bulldozers and other equipment. With the heavy equipment they could finish the field considerably ahead of the December deadline envisaged now by American engineers.

Both United States Air Force and RAF planes landed in Berlin like clockwork today. In a 24-hour stretch, 619 British and American planes brought in more than 5100 tons of supplies.

After concentrating for almost 50 days on food and coal, the growing airlift today brought in shoes and cigarettes for the more than two million blockaded Germans. Small amounts of raw materials also were being flown in to keep essential industries operating on a minimum scale.

Shutdowns Reported

Reports were printed of industrial shutdowns in the Soviet zone because of a shortage of supplies from the Ruhr and other western zone industrial centers. The British-licensed newspaper Sozial Democrat said this was the result of the Anglo-American counter-blockade to the Soviet blockade, shutting off coal and steel from Soviet zone plants.

On top of reports of widespread food shortages in the Russian zone, the Soviet-licensed news agency, ADN, revealed today a serious lack of farm machinery in the rich agricultural provinces of Brandenburg and Mecklenburg. It said the "German economic commission" for the zone had ordered the provinces of Thuringia, Saxony and Saxony-Anhalt to turn over 275 tractors with at least one earthworking machine for each tractor.

Alger Hiss Admits He Knew Chambers After Confronting Him

Ex-State Aide Says He Knew Time Editor as A 'George Crosley'

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Alger Hiss, former top-ranking policy-making State Department official, has admitted he knows Whittaker Chambers, reformed Communist who accused Hiss of being a member of a group of "elite" Communists in Government, the House Committee on Un-American Activities announced yesterday.

Committee members told the press that Hiss was confronted with Chambers, a senior editor of Time magazine, in the Hotel Commodore in New York City yesterday. Hiss, committee members said, identified Chambers as a "George Crosley," whom he knew in 1934 and 1935.

Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.), a member of the subcommittee which went to New York, said Hiss acknowledged that he had sub'et his apartment in Washington to "Crosley" and that he gave "Crosley" his automobile.

Again Denies Red Activity

The committee has set August 25 as a date for the two to confront each other under oath in public.

Subcommittee members said that although Hiss had now admitted knowing Chambers under an alias, he denied again that he was a member of a prewar group of "elite" Communists dedicated to securing positions of power and influence in the Government, or that he ever had been a Communist of any sort.

When Chambers first testified publicly before the committee three weeks ago, he gave a detailed account of the group he said were "elite" Communists. He described going to Hiss' home in 1937 and begging Hiss to break away from the Communist movement. Chambers said he reduced Hiss to tears but that the latter refused to sever his Communist connections and gave "party line" arguments for remaining within the Communist fold.

Denied Knowing "Chambers"

Hiss previously testifying under oath, called all charges "complete fabrications." He specifically said, however, that he had never heard of a man by the name of Whittaker Chambers.

In New York, Representative Richard Nixon (R., Calif.), a member of the subcommittee, said last night that although Hiss had admitted knowing Chambers under the name of Crosley, he had again denied all charges made against him.

"But we found out whether they knew each other during the time

Former Treasury Assistant

Harry Dexter White, Accused In Spy Inquiry, Dies at 56

Boston, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Harry Dexter White, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury accused of Soviet espionage activity during the current spy hearings at Washington, died unexpectedly at his Fitzwilliam, N. H., summer home late yesterday, it was disclosed today.

The 56-year-old economist who helped draw up the Bretton Woods monetary agreement, succumbed after a heart seizure. It was a recurrence of a disorder which he said was troubling him when he testified before the House Committee on Un-American Activities last week.

At the hearings, White categorically denied that he had been a member of "an elite Red underground group" and that he supplied information to a Soviet espionage network. He returned from Washington Friday.

He suffered the fatal heart seizure at 5:45 p. m. yesterday. His wife and a local physician were with him during his last hours. His body was brought to Boston to await funeral services and private burial. Rabbi Irving Mandell of Temple Israel in Boston will conduct services Thursday.

A Harvard graduate and World War I veteran, White went to work for the Treasury in 1934 and rose rapidly. He became director of the monetary research division in 1934 and was appointed Assistant Secretary under Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., January 3, 1945.

Moscow Talks Have 'Fairly Good' Chance

Decision by End Of Week Forecast In German Parley

By Joseph Newman

Moscow, Aug. 17 (NYHT).—The four-power talks going on at Moscow for the past three weeks now are in the final stage, acording to informed quarters, and a decision may materialize by the end of this week.

The chances of agreement to establish a modus vivendi for Berlin and to convoke the Council of Foreign Ministers by early September were described as "fairly good."

If an agreement is reached, the Council of Foreign Ministers will reexamine the entire situation in Germany and undertake to reestablish the four-power local organs at Berlin which ceased to function recently.

Unless fresh obstacles arise, there is the possibility the Western envoys will conclude their basic work with Soviet Foreign Minister Viacheslav M. Molotov at the next

Red Officials Demand They See Teacher

Vice Consul Asks 'Free Access' to Mrs. Kosenkina

New York, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Russian diplomatic officials tonight demanded free access to Mrs. Oksana S. Kosenkina, their fugitive school teacher, who was given a blood transfusion at Roosevelt Hospital.

For the second successive evening, a formal statement came out of the Soviet Consulate, scene of Mrs. Kosenkina's leap from a third-floor window last Thursday.

The statement was by Zot I. Cherpurnykh, Vice Consul, and Zana M. Ivanova, consulate secretary. It emphatically denied that Mrs. Kosenkina had told them she didn't want to see any representative of the Soviet Union, but added that it made no difference what the school teacher did say—she was being coached by hostile New York police and "White Guards."

Roosevelt Hospital issued a special bulletin to reveal the emergency transfusion. It said the teacher's condition was critical, "no better, no worse," and that her temperature was 103, her pulse 120.

The Russian statement made this demand:

"The Consul General of the USSR, in compliance with the commonly accepted international legal means of defense of citizens of his country, insists and will insist on his right to enjoy a free access to the sick Soviet citizen, Kosenkina, and to have a representative of the Soviet Consulate General present in her room."

The new demand represented a

Psychiatric Aid Urged for Income Tax Law Writers

London, Aug. 17 (AP).—Dr. Margaret Mead of New York told the International Congress of Mental Health today it should work on the people who write income-tax laws.

"Apart from increasing the blood pressure in older people," she said, "those laws have also affected people's marital relationships, and might even determine how many children parents would have."

Another report to the conference pointed out that failure to find decent living quarters bothers a youngster just at it does his parents.

2-4c Butter Drop Believed Probable Here by Weekend

A probable drop of 2 to 4 cents a pound in the retail price of butter here by this week's end was predicted yesterday by wholesale merchants.

The maximum drop would bring butter prices to consumers to 85 or 86 cents a pound, low retail price of the year except for special sales. Grade A butter, described as "the biggest seller here," was yesterday offered generally for 89 and 90 cents a pound.

The prediction of a retail price drop followed New York wholesale butter market reports of a second successive 2-cent drop this week. Unless the market suddenly reverses itself, experts said, the reduction will be passed on to consumers here by Thursday or Friday.

The reductions were attributed to seasonal increases of butter stocks in cold storage.

'One of Greatest Things'

Truman Praises Employers Using Handicapped Workers

President Truman yesterday praised national efforts to employ handicapped persons, terming the movement "one of the greatest things that is taking place in this country today."

He pointed out that about one out of every five Americans is physically handicapped in some way; many from war injuries, and declared that "had there been no war there would have been just as many physically handicapped."

The President spoke before the members of his Committee on National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, in annual meeting at the departmental auditorium, Department of Labor.

Other speakers included Secretary of State Marshall, who called the Nation's industrial and automobile accident rates "perfectly terrible" but the work of finding employment for the disabled "satisfying." Maurice J. Tobin, new Secretary of Labor, asked for a "52-week-a-year program" to encourage employment of the physically impaired.

The meeting was further highlighted by a call for Federal and State legislation to "overcome employers' fear" of employers' costs for workmen's compensation liability of physically disabled employes. The "fear," said Millard Rice, former national commander of the Disabled War Veterans, is preventing the hiring of "scores of thousands of service-handicapped veterans."

President Truman told the group of more than 100 vocational training and civic leaders that statistics soon to be released "show that the dollars spent by the Federal Government to rehabilitate the physically handicapped returned $10 for every dollar invested in the productive capacity of these people."

The President said records show there are 28 million physically handicapped persons in the United States "crippled in industry and crippled in war." Not only must ways be found to rehabilitate the disabled, he said, but ways must be found to prevent accidents.

Rice, in his report, told the committee there are 1,500,000 disabled and unemployed veterans today, including those currently receiving educational benefits of the Government. He estimated that some 2,300,000 disabled veterans are receiving monetary benefits from the Veterans' Administration "with probably another one million being equitably entitled."

Hundreds Reported Killed

Arab Legion Hurls Back Drive Of Jewish Tanks in Jerusalem

Amman, Trans-Jordan, Aug. 17 (AP).—An official Trans-Jordan statement tonight said the Arab Legion had thrown back a heavy Jewish attack on legion positions in southern Jerusalem and killed "several hundred" Jews.

The statement said the Jewish attack on the Deir Abu Tor sector was "supported with tanks, armored cars and automatic weapons."

(A Jerusalem dispatch reported that a large-scale artillery duel between Jews and Arabs raged for five hours. Some shelling of civilian areas was reported and Arab shellfire battered Jewish positions along the entire corridor that bisects the Holy City from north to south.)

The fighting in the Deir Abu Tor sector followed a night in which Trans-Jordan officials claimed the Jews had seized Government House in Jerusalem, violating the International Red Cross flag that marked it as a refugee security zone.

Later the Trans-Jordan government announced Government House had been repossessed by the International Red Cross and that all the Jews had withdrawn.

Count Folke Bernadotte has appealed to the United States for emergency food supplies to help 337,000 refugees from Jewish-Arab fighting in Palestine.

The State Department said the request is being treated as urgent.

May End Seclusion Now

Rich Briton Preferred Rats To Humans for Last 20 Years

London, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Multi-millionaire Sir John Reeves Ellerman, who for 20 years has preferred the companionship of rats to humans, is about to emerge from his seclusion, intimates said today.

Ellerman, reputedly the richest man in England, is almost through with his life work—a three-volume study of rats and allied pests. He lives in a villa full of rats surrounded by a six-foot wall with barbed wire on top, and maintains a country home for a vast collection of rodents.

The shy, 38-year-old heir to a shipping fortune decided when he was only 18 that he would rather count rats than dollars. He spurned a career as director of a trade empire including shipping lines, breweries, newspapers and real estate and set out to classify rodents.

Ellerman married a former art student and settled down with his rats to work on his 750,000-word treatise. The study is entitled "Family and Genera of Living Rodents." His wife has illustrated it.

His career has been shrouded in so much secrecy that many people in the village near his Seven Gables villa at Eastbourne believe the mansion belongs to a Mr. Fountain. Horace C. Fountain is Ellerman's butler.

Most of the time he spends at home, with the wife and rats and some porcupines he keeps as house pets.

Calling Criminologist 'Biggest Liar' Merely Made Him Smile Over Charge

Feature a husky, affable and ingenious criminologist who merely smiled because a woman called him "the biggest liar in the world" and you have Dr. Leonarde Keeler.

Reflect on the irony of it all, too, for he has spent more than a modicum of his 44 years in developing a contrivance to expose prevaricators in their true light.

Dr. Keeler, who put together his polygraph or "lie detector" in 1923, may make a return engagement to Washington this month in the drama being enacted before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Witnesses Alger Hiss and Whittaker Chambers have been offered use of the polygraph to confirm or deny their conflicting testimony in Communist spy-ring hearing, although developments yesterday made this appear unlikely.

The Chicago student of crime and criminals last caught the public's eye, and fancy, here when he appeared as a witness in the Hesse crown jewel theft case.

Although recordings of the polygraph—Greek for "many pictures"—have not been admitted as prima facie evidence in court, Col. Jack W. Durant was given the test in 1947. Testimony at his trial indicated that the machine may have led Army investigators to search for buried loot in Virginia, where it was later found.

Durant Counsel Sought Fact

Dr. Keeler was described after the trial as "a salesman who had the audience sold on his product." He had been confronted by Capt. Glenn Bumbaugh, defense counsel for Colonel Durant, who asked:

"Didn't the colonel tell you he thought you were the biggest liar in the world?"

"Not the colonel," answered the witness. "His wife did, but not the colonel."

Dr. Keeler smiled and the courtroom shook with laughter.

Mrs. Kathleen Nash Durant, a former WAC captain, already had been tried, found guilty and sentenced to five years for her part in the theft of $1,500,000 worth of the jewels.

Dr. Keeler's detector is equipped with automatically controlled pens which register emotional disturbances much in the fashion a seismograph records earthquakes. When a lawbreaker denies his crime during a lie-detector exam, the pens become noticeably agitated.

A guilty man, seeing that the machine is practically reading his mind, frequently breaks down and speaks the truth.

The polygraph measures and records the subject's breathing, changes in pulse and blood pressure, and electrical impulses caused by variations in skin resistance.

It may continue to be a bone of contention in courts of the land, but its inventor maintains it's more often right than wrong.—Richard Morris.

Masaryk Was Not a Suicide, His Personal Physician Says

New York, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Jan Masaryk's personal physician, Dr. Oskar Klinger, is convinced the Czech statesman did not commit suicide.

He said the two of them had planned to escape by plane to Britain the very day Masaryk plunged to his death, an article in the Saturday Evening Post revealed today.

The doctor also disclosed that Masaryk sent from Czechoslavakia three days before his death "an American woman to whom he was deeply attached and whom he intended to marry." He told her, the article said, that he would join her in London as soon as possible.

Klinger gave his views to C. Henry Grandon, diplomatic correspondent of the London Sunday Times and a long-time personal friend of Masaryk.

Brandon's article, based on conversations with Klinger, explains Masaryk's leap to death from a third-story window last March 10 in these words:

"Masaryk's plan to flee the country became known to the security police. So they came to arrest or kill him that night. In self-defense, Masaryk first used his revolver, killing possibly four people. Having no bullet left for himself, and with the remaining men closing in on him, he was forced nearer and nearer to the window. Either he was resisting and the men threw him out of the window or, refusing to be overpowered by them, Masaryk himself took the plunge as a reaction to overwhelming fear, not as a form of voluntary or planned suicide."

The article said that Dr. Klinger, who later left Czechoslovakia alone, had investigated his friend's death and found these reasons to "prove that Masarky was murdered."

Masaryk had arranged to meet Dr. Klinger secretly shortly after 7 a. m. on March 10 near a vast meadow, big enough for a good-sized plane to land.

"We will be flown to England," Masaryk told Klinger. "Take only the barest necessities with you. And don't contact me any more from now on, even by telephone. Should the plan fail and I don't ring you tomorrow, come and see me as usual in the morning."

Chambers referred to." Nixon said.

"That was the big thing," he added.

Nixon said he had no comment on whether Hiss said he knew Chamners as a Communist, or whether Hiss had told the committee members any details of his relationship with "Crosley."

"It would be better to go to Mr. Hiss about that," Nixon said.

Fast-moving Battle

Meanwhile, there were these other developments in the fast-moving battle over Communist espionage:

1. Attorney General Tom C. Clark denied last night the Justice Department had ever given its approval to public hearings by the Senate Investigating Subcommittee into charges against William W. Remington, former Commerce Department employe, charged with being a member of an espionage ring described by Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley.

2. On the other side of the Capitol, Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) of the House Committee on Un-American Activities lashed out at President Truman for what he said was an attempt to conceal "the true facts concerning Communist espionage in Washington."

3. Thomas said no charge of "red herring" even from the President of the United States could stop the committee from disclosure of the situation. He said that a still further unsuspected spying ring would soon be disclosed by the committee.

4. A temporary flurry within the committee over a supposed news "leak" concerning an alleged offer of a lie detector test to Hiss was quickly dispelled when the committee received positive information that the supposed leak of committee information did not come from anyone connected with it. Members and staff of the committee had pledged themselves to secrecy in the matter.

Attempted "Cover-up" Charged

The latest exchange between Ferguson and Clark occurred after Ferguson had bluntly accused the Justice Deartment of an attempted "cover-up" of disclosures of Communist espionage in Government.

Ferguson yesterday released a letter he had written to Clark, reading in part:

"I might point out that your suggestion that the committee may have damaged your prosecution is particularly incongruous in the light of the formal statement of President Truman to a news conference in which he said:

"'No information has been disclosed in the past few days by congressional committees that has not long been known to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"'The Federal grand jury found this information insufficient to justify indictment of the Federal employes involved.'"

Clark Writes Ferguson

Clark wrote Ferguson:

"It is difficult to say how much damage to efforts to arrive at a sound basis for prosecution in the espionage case has been done by the open hearings."

Ferguson's version was that William P. Rogers, chief counsel for the committee, had consulted with Clark's assistants and "advised them of our purpose and the procedure planned to be followed, the witnesses who were to be called and the questions they would be asked."

"Rogers asked if this would in any way embarrass your investigation and was assured that nothing we proposed to do would interfere with or impair your work," Ferguson said in his latest letter.

Clark retorted that "the first this department ever heard of any contemplated hearing by your committee" was on July 28. He said Rogers talked with Peyton Ford, the assistant to the Attorney General, on that day and said the committee was considering questioning Elizabeth T. Bentley, the chief witness in the espionage hearings, who implicated herself and many others in the alleged handling of security information.

Clark Continues

"Mr. Ford later learned that the committee had already been questioning Miss Bentley in secret for several days," Clark told Ferguson. "The next day I directed Mr. T. Vincent Quinn, the Assistant Attorney General, who was in charge of the espionage case (before the Federal grand jury in New York), to advise both the Senate and House committees of our investigation, the activity of the grand jury, the fact that Miss Bentley, Mr. Remington (William W. Remington, suspended Commerce Department officials), and other had testified before it, and our continued effort to arrive at a sound basis for prosecution of the case.

"Mr. Quinn reported to me that the counsel for the committee stated tha only executive hearings of your committee were being considered, and that the testimony therein would be limited to that concerning Mr. Remington.

"However, on the very next day, at 11 a. m., you announced that Miss Bentley would testify at a public hearing at 2 p. m. that day.

"Messrs. Ford and Quinn both stated that only executive hearings vise your counsel or anyone on the committee that hearings by the committee would not embarrass our investigation or interfere with or impair our work on the case."

Clark reiterated that the grand jury which looked into alleged spy work among Government employes has never been dismissed and that an active FBI investigation is still in progress.

The Attorney General said he would be glad to adopt a suggestion by Ferguson that they hold a personal conference "with a view to assuring that the future handling of this situation will promote the national interest."

Ferguson Defends Procedure

Ferguson had written Clark that:

"The claim that a disclosure of the information sought by this committee would give aid or comfort to a possible enemy should not be utilized as a cloak of secrecy to keep from our own people the failure of their Government.

"Our committee has information that several of those suspected of espionage were permitted to continue in sensitive governmental positions ither through influence or neglect."

Barkley Says GOP Covering Up 'Failure'

Chicago, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Senator Alben Barkley, Democratic candidate for Vice President, said today that the congressional spy investigation has "had the effect" of covering up the "failure" of the Republican-controlled Congress to fight inflation.

Barkley, who came here to address the annual convention of the Loyal Order of Moose, said he does not consider the spy case an issue in the November election. "No one wants Communists in the Government," he said. "Certainly they should have been and have been dismissed."

New Teacher Demand Made

reduction of that delivered to the State Department Saturday by the Soviet Ambassador which was refused. He asked for complete custody of Mrs. Kosenkina.

Tonight's demand was accompanied by an accusation that the teacher was being subjected to harassment and pressure.

The hospital today gave the most complete report to date of the serious injuries the teacher suffered in her leap.

It revealed that she had suffered a "retroperitoneal hemorrhage"—a hemorrhage behind the lining of the stomach, between the muscles of her lower back or side in the general region of the kidneys.

She also had extensive fractures of the upper right leg, extensive compound fractures of the right kneecap, a fractured pelvis, multiple dislocations, and a fracture of the right foot, and a fracture of a vertebra in the lower back.

Judge Who Issued Writ Sees State Department

Justice Samuel Dickstein of the New York Supreme Court came to Washington yesterday to talk with State Department officials about diplomatic problems linked to the Kosenkina case.

Dickstein is the judge who issued a writ last week directing the Soviet Consul General in New York to produce in his court Mrs. Oksana Stepanova Kosenkina, the Russian school teacher who then was in the consulate.

That was before Mrs. Kosenkina jumped from a window.

The Consul General in New York, and the Soviet Ambassador here both protested that the court order was without force.

The State Department asked that Dickstein take no further action until there had been additional investigation in the case.

Red Magazine Assails American 'Gangsterism'

Moscow, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—The labor magazine, New Times, charged today that the "criminal abduction" of Mrs. Oksana Kosenkina by American officials is proof that the United States is "transferring the gangsterism which has been flourishing in American morals to the arena of international relations."

Moscow newspapers today made no mention of the case of Mrs. Kosenkina. The daily press has printed only one brief story on the case in the past three days.

New Times cited as examples of United States "gangsterism" the existence of Russian refugee institutions in the United States, and the alleged recruitment of Russian citizens from displaced persons camps in Germany to spy on the Soviet Union.

management, he was a trustee of the Import-Export Bank and he was the Treasury spokesman at committee meetings of the Economic Defense Board.

White was generally credited with the authorship of the United States - sponsored international plans for handling postwar financial problems.

His monetary proposals were the foundation for the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank created by the United Nations Financial and Monetary Conference at Bretton Woods, N. H., in 1944.

White also had a hand in drafting the so-called "Morgenthau Plan" for dealing with postwar Germany, which eventually was written off by American policy makers as economically impractical.

In denying charges at the committee hearing Friday, White said he was recovering from a heart seizure and asked for a 10-minute recess after each hour of testimony.

He had been doubly accused. Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley said White was one of 30 wartime Government officials who fed information to a Soviet spy ring for which she was courier.

Magazine Editor Whittaker Chambers, a former Communist, said White was a "fellow traveler" and that he belonged to an underground group set up by foreign agents among persons "who appeared to be going places" in the Government.

White was born in Boston, and was graduated from Columbia and Leland Stanford Universities before obtaining a Harvard doctorate in philosophy and economics.

He is survived by his wife, the former Anne Terry of Springfield, and two daughters, Joan and Ruth White.

had agreed to postpone the strike indefinitely. It charged the company with a "double cross" in failing to accept a provisional agreement just before the strike deadline of 7 a. m. today.

Harvester denied the charge and accused the union of lying.

First-shift workers at two Indianapolis plants and at Evansville, Ind.; Melrose Park, Ill.; Memphis, Tenn., and Springfield, Ohio, failed to report. They set up picket lines.

At Fort Wayne some 7200 day and evening shift workers were at their jobs in what officials here said was a delay in getting the strike going.

Union and company negotiators bargained all last night in an attempt to settle differences over apprenticeship, grievance procedure and piecework rates. The UAW already had accepted an 11-cent hourly wage boost offer.

Morrell Packing Co. To Reopen in Strike

Ottumwa, Iowa, Aug. 17 (A.P.). The Morrell Packing Co., idled for the third day by a labor dispute, said tonight it will be open again tomorrow to all employes who wish to work "under our standing procedures."

The dispute flared when the company posted new working rules after the union's contract expired last week.

In reply to a union spokesman's assertion that the company's action constitutes "a lockout," a Morrell statement said:

"There is work available for any employe who agrees to conform to the instructions of his supervisor. There is no lockout of any kind."

Ed Filliman, chief steward of the 3000-member union, said the union was advising workers to apply for unemployment compensation payments. He claimed the company had ordered the workers home. A thousand claims were filed by midafternoon.

(It has been standard Iowa policy to withhold jobless benefits when plants are closed by labor disputes.)

Court Orders Ending Of State Dock Strike

Mobile, Ala., Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Circuit Judge Cecil F. Bates issued an injunction today directing two unions to call off immediately their strike against the Alabama State docks.

He also issued a temporary injunction enjoining the CIO warehousemen and AFL railroad shop workers from further picketing at the entrance of the State-operated facility.

13-Cent Increase Taken by Glass Mold Makers

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 17 (A.P.). The Nation's glass mold makers today accepted an average hourly wage increase of 13 cents offered by container manufacturers.

Harry H. Cook of Toledo, Ohio, president of the AFL American Flint Glass Workers Union, said the agreement "removes the threat of a general work stoppage."

The union began negotiations more than a month ago with a 30-cent-an-hour boost for mold makers as its goal. The manufacturers refused to meet the demand. The matter was turned over to the United States Conciliation Service.

"It isn't all we wanted," Cook said. "We're satisfied it was the best to be obtained under the circumstances."

Bulgar Terrorists Die

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 17 (U.P.). Seven men were executed Friday at the Plovdiv district prison for conspiring to form armed groups for "terroristic actions, sabotage and murders," the government announced today.

Pendergast Man Elected Head of County Committee

Kansas City, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—The Pendergast organization, headed by Jim Pendergast, nephew of the late Democratic boss, Tom Pendergast, today regained control of the Jackson County Democratic Committee.

In a bitter contest, Leo. T. Schwartz, Kansas City lawyer, supported by Pendergast, was elected chairman of the committee by the narrow margin of four votes.

Schwartz received 30 votes against 26 for Ralph M. Russell, also a Kansas City attorney, supported by factional opponents of Pendergast.

Opera Association Board Rejects Joint Union Plan

New York, Aug. 17 (NYHT).—The Metropolitan Opera Association board of directors rejected today a joint-union proposal which had been offered as an alternative to a demand for wage increases, it was learned tonight.

There were strong indications, however, that the 12 unions involved, while bitter and incensed, will accept the Metropolitan's rejection and reluctantly renew working agreements for the 1948-1949 season without wage increases or further new benefits.

to an additional $1,821,000,000 will be required before next June 30.

Halleck declared Mr. Truman "degraded his high and respected office" by calling the extra session in "an obviously desperate political maneuver."

The Republican leader noted that in that brief session Congress authorized an increase in bank reserves, and power to limit installment credit. Halleck also praised the Republican-sponsored housing legislation and predicted that one million dwelling units will be completed this year "in the biggest building boom of all time."

Barkley said the Republican housing bill enacted at the extra session "met every demand of the real estate lobby." He also declared Congress failed to pass an adequate antiinflation measure. He concluded:

"The Congress adjourned on August 7. This action is properly listed among its accomplishments."

Adm. Momsen to Speak

Consumer Credit Controls May Be Issued Today

Controls over consumer credit, less restrictive than those in effect during the war, but tightening sales practices now in effect, will be issued by the Federal Reserve today or Thursday, it was learned yesterday.

The regulations, to be effective in 30 days, will be promulgated under the Anti-Inflation Act passed at the special session of Congress and signed Monday by President Truman.

Under the wartime installment credit controls, terminated last November, restrictions were applied to purchases ranging from $50 up to $2000. It was expected that the $50 limit will be revived, but the top level may be increased to $3000 because of the higher prices prevailing now.

One third of the sales price is being forecast as the required down payment for automobiles, radios, television sets, refrigerators, furniture and other similar household effects required.

AEC to Investigate Uranium Ore Reports

San Bernardino, Calif., Aug. 17 (U.P.).—The Atomic Energy Commission today indicated it would investigate reported discovery of uranium in "hopeful quantities" in lonely Marshall Canyon, near Beaumont.

A commission spokesman in Washington said the commission has been notified of the possible new source of the metal needed for manufacture of the atom bomb.

Red 'Filibuster' Blocks Action By U. N. Group

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 17 (U.P.). A 10-day Soviet "filibuster" today forced the United Nations Economic and Social Council to abandon its discussion of three conventions on the gathering and international transmission of news and freedom of information.

Those conventions and a convention on genocide and a declaration of human rights will be referred without decision to the U. N. General Assembly, which convenes in Paris September 21.

Each member of the human rights committee, which has been discussing the proposals, will state his government's position and, without further debate or decision, the documents and statements of position will be passed along to the assembly.

Heartbeat Is Delayed 7 Minutes After Birth

Yonkers, N. Y., Aug. 17 (A.P.).—A 13-pound boy born yesterday at Yonkers General Hospital apparently was thriving today, although his heart did not beat until 7 minutes after birth.

Dr. Frank R. Fabiani, said he worked over the baby 7 minutes, finally giving it an intercardiac injection of adrenalin. Immediately after the injection, he said, the boy's heart began functioning.

In such cases heart action usually is restored within 1 to 2 minutes, hospital authorities said.

Miss Bentley Asks Others to Speak Up

Dewey Plans Tight Liaison With Warren

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 17 (U.P.)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and his vice presidential running mate today assigned liaison officers to keep them closely linked during their separate Nation-wide campaigns.

Hickman Powell, one of Dewey's top braintrusters, was appointed to travel with Gov. Earl Warren of California, while State Senator T. H. Delap of Richmond, Calif., was assigned to accompany Dewey.

Announcement of the appointments was made by the New York Governor following two days of strategy talk, described by Dewey as "productive and illuminating."

The Republican candidate said he and Warren had discussed most of the possible campaign issues with State and Nation advisers.

Among new conferees at today's strategy talk was Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts, who said he had offered his services as a "pick and shovel man" for the campaign.

Elizabeth T. Bentley, self-admitted former Communist spy, last night appealed to other disillusioned Communists to "come forward now and tell what you know."

Central figure in the House Un-American Activities Committee investigation of Communist spy rings in this country, Miss Bentley appeared on the television and regular CBS broadcast show of "We, The People."

Her interviewer asked Miss Bentley how she, with the advantages of an education at Vassar College and Columbia University, got involved in communism.

"In 1936," she said, "I returned from a year of studying music in Italy. I was quite infuriated by what I had seen of fascism there. . . . "

Miss Bentley said she met her first Communists when she began to work for the American League Against War and Fascism. But not all members of the league were Communists, she added.

"There were a lot of other misguided souls," she said, "who really thought they were working for a better world. Gradually . . . my ideas changed. I thought of myself as a liberal . . . and we liberals seemed to have no other place to turn for guidance.

"We knew nothing of the real communism. The leaders we saw in this country seemed to be doing a good job, and traveling in the right direction. Then, first thing I knew I was in espionage work . . . without ever realizing how it happened."

And how about the rude awakening—the realization she was performing a disservice to her own Government?

That came, answered Miss Bentley, with the death in November, 1943, of Jacob Golos, her immediate superior in the American Communist Party. Then, she said, she was thrown "in direct contact with actual Russian Communists."

"They made no bones about their utter contempt for American Communists," she added, "and our vague idealism. They also made no bones about using us for espionage."

Miss Bentley appealed to others "taken in as I was" to come forward and do something about it.

"It isn't enough to just quit being a Communist, as I know hundreds have," she said. "Come forward now, and tell what you know, while there's still time to undo the damage we have so foolishly done."

Publishers Hit At ITU Rights, Pilch Charges

Milwaukee, Aug. 17 (U.P.)—John Pilch, head of the Chicago Local of the AFL International Typographical Union, charged today that Chicago publishers sought to "emasculate" rights and working conditions of the union.

Addressing the ninetieth convention of the union, Pilch said Local 16 had done "everything humanly possible" to end the strike. Five Chicago papers have been struck for nearly nine months, but have continued publication.

"The pressures are still on us but we must win or we won't have a union," Pilch told about 450 cheering delegates.

He said the Chicago Newspaper Publishers Association has indicated that future meetings would serve no purpose, but he said it agreed to take several days to find out if any individual publishers have changed their stand on disputed points.

Pilch said the union was unable to apply "pressure" in its strike because it was "restrained and restricted by the Taft-Hartley law."

speeches in Hamtramck, Pontiac and Flint.

Meanwhile, Mr. Truman will take a nine-day cruise aboard the presidential yacht USS Williamsburg. He will leave Friday, accompanied by his White House staff, journey down the Potomac to Chesapeake Bay, through the Delaware Ship Canal, down Delaware Bay to its mouth, along the coast to Hampton Roads, and back through Chesapeake Bay to the Potomac.

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said it would be "not only a vacation but a working trip in preparation for the campaign."

Mayor David Lawrence of Pittsburgh called at the White House yesterday and asked Mr. Truman to make his Labor Day speech in the Steel City. Lawrence told reporters afterward the President said it would be impossible, since he was committed to the Detroit engagement. It is expected Mr. Truman will speak in Pittsburgh later in the campaign.

Russian Girl Keeps Refuge in Sweden

Stockholm, Aug. 17 (U.P.)—The newspaper Dagens Nyheter today reported the failure of an alleged Soviet attempt to force a 19-year-old girl refugee to return to Russia against her will.

Soviet Embassy officials were so persistent in their attempts to see the unnamed girl that the Swedish family with whom she lived reported it to the Swedish Foreign Office, which asked state police to investigate.

The newspaper said the girl plans to become a Swedish citizen.

Arias Leaving Costa Rica for U. S.

San Jose, Costa Rica, Aug. 7 (AP).—Arnulfo Arias Madrid, exiled former President of Panama, and several of his friends will leave Wednesday for the United States, the Costa Rican Foreign Office said tonight.

Costa Rican authorities have ordered Arias to quit the country. Last week the Panamanian government charged that Arias, who was defeated in the May presidential election, was organizing an armed invasion of Panama in Costa Rica.

Republicans to Spend 4 Millions, Scott Says

Los Angeles, Aug. 17 (U.P.)—Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr., chairman of the Republican National Committee, said today the Republicans expect to spend about four million dollars in the fall presidential and congressional elections.

The Philadelphia Congressman said that three million dollars would be spent for the presidential campaign, $400,000 for Senators and $600,000 for Congressmen.

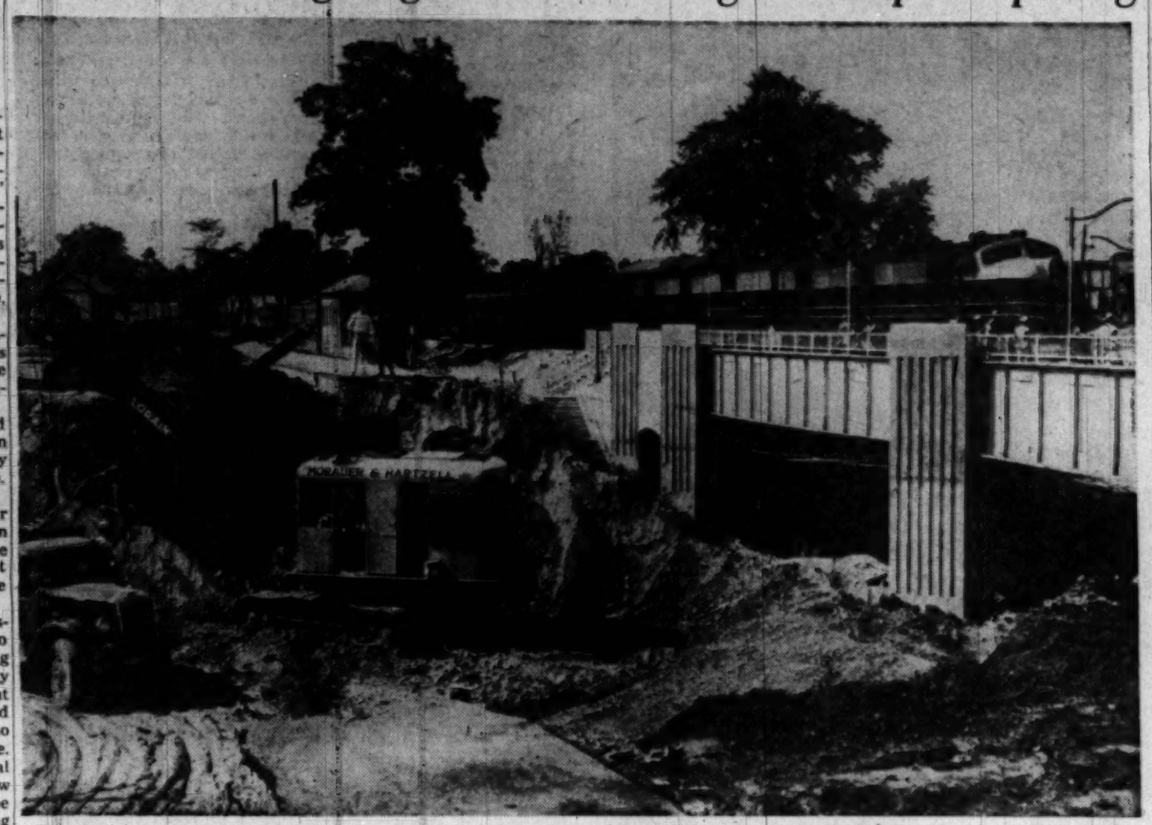
The Silver Lining—Light Shines Through Underpass Opening



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

INFORMAL "UNVEILING"—Many Silver Spring residents—even those who fave followed a round-about path home for 14 months—were unaware yesterday that the long-awaited railroad underpass on Georgia ave. was being "unveiled." A power shovel, digging away the temporary earth fill which supported rerouted B. & O. tracks and stood like an "iron curtain" before the traffic underpass, provided the first clear view of what the million-dollar project will look like. It is scheduled for formal opening September 11. Trains are already using the overpass tracks. Note Washington-bound train halted at station

Soviet Embassy Gave $40,000 to Canadian Communist Party

By Igor Gouzenko

(This is the story of the former Russian cipher expert who exposed Stalin's spy ring in Canada in September, 1945. It duplicates greatly the story now being unfolded before Congressional investigators.—Editor's Note.)

During the course of a Royal Commission investigating charges that the Ontario Provincial Government was operating a "Gestapo" police unit, it had been disclosed that the Soviet Embassy had donated $40,000 to the Communist Party of Canada.

The ambassador sent an urgent order that no members of the staff were under any circumstances to answer any queries put to them by newspaper reporters. Zabotin followed this up by calling a meeting of the military attache's staff and stressing the importance of being cautious in conversation with foreigners in general, as well as the newspaper group.

After the meeting, Zabotin accompanied me into the little cipher room to check some telegrams I was sending for him. He thumbed through the forms absentmindedly.

"You know," he said to me, "one Ottawa paper has connected my name with the $40,000."

Zabotin's frown turned to a wide smile on seeing my alarm. "Of course, I never gave them the $40,000. But who knows," he continued thoughtfully, "maybe Pavlov or Goussarov did?"

Gift Officially Denied

The press pressure was soon felt at the embassy. Belokhvostikov, the first secretary, officially denied that the embassy had given the Communist Party $40,000 for an election campaign.

Moscow was surprisingly calm, but asked Zabotin for a detailed report, including an explanation of how his name became involved. This latter query caused Zabotin a period of panic until it was discovered that the newspaper had made mere incidental reference to Zabotin. But it did prompt me to ask how Moscow could possibly have learned about such a minor item so soon after it appeared in print.

Zabotin gestured toward a map of Canada hanging on the wall.

"This one country of less than 13 million people," he said, "has nine separate intelligence networks operating in direct contact with Moscow. Needless to say, each one likes to hasten any information derogatory to any or all of the other eight networks. Just recently, quite by accident, I found there is another USSR network operating here in Ottawa under control of army intelligence headquarters in Moscow."

I was dumfounded and must have showed it. Zabotin laughed shortly.

"Makes for Efficiency"

"Oh, don't look so alarmed! It all makes, I suppose, for more efficiency, although it is annoying at times."

The $40,000 incident tended to make the embassy more precaution-minded than ever. I don't know what the head men expected, but Zabotin carried a revolver constantly from that time and guards were ordered to check their firearms. Instructions were issued to the doormen that when opening the door for anybody after 7 o'clock in the evening, they had to draw their revolvers and have them ready "for instant action."

One morning a duty man found footsteps in the snow leading to one of the cellar windows. This caused an investigation which accomplished nothing except to create more tension than ever.

Aleksashkin, chief of the secret division of the embassy, began checking up on desks and safes everywhere. From the embassy he toured the house of the commercial counsellor and then tried to check on the military attache's building. But Zabotin flatly refused. This caused a strenuous exchange of telegrams with Moscow, Zabotin claiming that Aleksashkin had a right to check up on the security of documents, but not to inspect the contents of same. The result was victory for Zabotin, but Moscow ordered that he do the checking personally.

Customs Tightens Up

There was evidence around this time of a severe tightening up of the already tight Soviet customs department; something which caused considerable uneasy conjecture.

Moscow sent an exhaustive list of items which could not be brought back to the Soviet Union by working citizens returning from foreign assignments. One banned item was "knitting literature."

It was forbidden to bring back such household appliances as a vacuum cleaner. Again, the reason was apparent. Russian housewives in nearby houses would certainly marvel at such a wonder from the democratic land and be impressed on hearing that most homes have one there.

With the departure of Romanov the undercurrent of uneasiness was intensified.

As for Zabotin, he seemed to be losing some of his former self-confidence. He appeared to feel misfortune would eventually come to him—that there was a web of intrigue closing in. When he eventually began to suspect Motinov as the key to his troubles, the atmosphere became charged with bitter feeling to an unprecedented degree.

(Tomorrow—Gouzenko is told that he and his family have been ordered to return to Russia immediately—but he decides he will not go.)

meeting. This may materialize by Thursday.

Should the meeting prove successful, it is understood the Western envoys will have a final meeting with Prime Minister Stalin to put the stamp of approval on the agreement. The meeting with Stalin probably would follow almost immediately after the one with Molotov.

Envoys Reported Firm

London, Aug. 17 (U.P.)—Top-ranking British and foreign diplomatic officials conferred today on the latest East-West meeting in Moscow, as official sources denied that there had been any change in six-power plans to set up a separate state in western Germany.

These sources pointed to already scheduled trizonal meetings, and emphasized yesterday's statement by United States Gen. Lucius D. Clay that "I know of no intention by anybody to deviate from the present program."

Western representatives are scheduled to meet next month, probably in Paris, to discuss plans for a provisional constitution for the western zones of Germany and to work out details of six-power control of the Ruhr.

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 17 (AP).—The bodies of all 20 persons killed aboard an American C-47 transport plane that crashed last winter in the Italian Alps have been recovered, it was reported tonight.

United States Air Force officers said the plane's manifest showed there were only 20 persons aboard—not 22 or 23 as was reported previously.

Anglican Bishops Condemn Red 'Lies'

From Press Dispatches

London, August 17.—The Lambeth Conference of Anglican Bishops from five continents today published the most important Anglican Church documents in 18 years, condemning the "cruelties, injustice and lying propaganda" of communism and recommending that the atom bomb be outlawed.

The conference, which ended its work 10 days ago, decided the World Anglican Conference will be held in the United States in June, 1953. The Archbishop of Canterbury will organize the conference and select the exact site.

The conference, which spent five weeks in secret deliberations, included 66 American bishops. It also urged:

1. Agreement without delay on peace treaties with Germany and Japan based on justice.

2. The United Nations to place Jerusalem and its environs under permanent international control with freedom of access to sacred places for Christians, Jews and Moslems.

3. Revision of present easy divorce law in the United States, Britain and elsewhere which have "weakened the lifelong nature of marriage and brought untold suffering to children."

Proposal Rejected

The conference rejected a proposal by the General Synod of the Church of China to ordain women to the priesthood for an experimental period of 20 years.

Anglican Church documents released for publication include 120 resolutions covering a wide range of subjects, 120 pages of reports of the conference committees and an "encyclical letter to the faithful in Jesus Christ," which will be read October 10 in all Anglican Churches throughout the world.

The plea to outlaw the atomic bomb was stated most forcibly in the encyclical letter.

"We call upon all nations collectively to control the manufacture and use of atomic power and to pledge themselves never to use it for purposes of war," the letter said. "We call upon the nations also, even at the price of limiting their own sovereignity, to work together to remove the causes of war and to promote human culture and welfare. We trust therefore that the Christian churches will give strong support to the United Nations, so that it may become a more effective organ of world cooperation."

On communism, the encyclical said, "mankind has only recently escaped conquest by totalitarian states which defied their own power. It now finds itself threatened by a new menace of Marxian Communism which exalts atheism, puts supreme confidence in material progress and proclaims its gospel with militant enthusiasm which expects to conquer the world.

Asks Repudiation

"Christians must repudiate this form of communism and must condemn its cruelties, injustice and lying propaganda which is inherent in it."

The conference called upon all Christians to study and understand the theory and practice of communism "so that they may be well instructed as to which elements in it are in conflict with the Christian view of man and must therefore be resisted and which elements are true judgment on existing social and economic order."

The report made it clear, however, that the church would not take part in a political anti-Communist crusade.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, in a press conference, also warned that all anti-Communist forces were not necessarily good forces, citing as an example Adolf Hitler and his Nazis.

Communist Bloc Approves Danube Freeze-Out of West

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Communist bloc tonight approved a Soviet plan for control of the Danube River. The Western powers were certain to reject it.

The 11-nation conference, meeting as a drafting committee, finished the task of approving a pact which—as Russia put it—is designed to sign the "death warrant" for the 1921 Danube Convention.

The conference will meet Wednesday and the United States, Britain and France plan then to say they will not sign the agreement and may take their case to the International Court at The Hague.

The final controversy swirled around a Russian move to outlaw all obligations of the old Danube Convention. A French attempt to modify this was defeated, as have been all other attempts at modification of the Russian proposals by the Western powers.

Outtalked and outvoted, the Western powers have concentrated for the past week on building a case to justify their refusal to sign a majority agreement drafted at a conference in which they have taken an active part.

Their refusal will be based in large measure upon Russian refusal to accept a single compromise in its plan to bar the Western nations from any voice in control of Europe's most important inland waterway.

Greeks Battle For Grammos Peak Control

Athens, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Greek army announced new gains today in its tortuous advance into the rugged Grammos Mountains, last major stronghold of Communist leader Markos Vafiades.

Loss of his stronghold would be a hard blow for Vafiades, but non-Greek military sources emphasized it would not end the civil war. Thousands of rebels still are scattered over the country, engaged in sabotage and other anti-government activities.

The fate of the main peak of the Grammos Mountains remained obscure. War Minister George Stratos told the cabinet last night it had been taken by government forces, but a general staff spokesman said today bitter fighting on the peak continued, with army units still 200 yards from the top.

In Athens, telegraph and telephone workers defied the government and struck to enforce pay demands. The government recently had mobilized these employes, making the strike a defiance of the army as well as the government.

[The United Press said it had learned that United States Air Secretary W. Stuart Symington and Air Force Chief Lieut. Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg conferred secretly with leaders of the United States Military Mission in Greece last weekend. The two Air Force officials are now in Turkey.—Editor's note.]

Italian Reds Publish Plan For 'Defense'

Rome, Aug. 17 (NYHT).—Measures for the "defense" of communism in Italy were published today by the leaders of the Italian Communist Party in obedience to wishes indicated a month ago by Joseph Stalin.

The party directorate ordered Italy's 2,200,000 enrolled Communists to step up "adequate measures" to protect the party and in particular its chieftain, Palmiro Togliatti.

The Communist directorate charged that anti-Communist spies have worked themselves into their organization.

The new Communist orders admittedly were in response to the letter Stalin sent immediately after last month's attempt on the life of Togliatti. Stalin commented angrily that Russian Communists were "sad" that Togliatti's friends failed to defend him.

The directorate said Communists have made the mistake of becoming "too affable" lately.

Britain Must Prepare for War On Its Soil, Montgomery Says

Blackpool, England, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Britain must be prepared for land battles against enemy forces which might try to invade the British Isles in a future war, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, chief of the imperial staff, said today.

Montgomery, receiving the freedom of the City of Blackpool, appealed for recruits for Britain's territorial army which, he said, must total 150,000 men.

"A somewhat uneasy peace is brooding over the world," he said. "It is more like truce than peace. It is a period of exhaustion, ill-described as peace."

Montgomery said he believed "freedom, justice and peace" should be Britain's objectives, and in that order.

"Some people put peace first," he said, "but that cannot be right. Peace is a by-product and not a direct aim. If we make it too much a central target, we get appeasement. A nation that is brave enough to protect freedom and justice without regard to risks is more likely to get peace than by a policy of appeasement and passivity.

"We have to prepare for battles on land. In another war, this might include battles against enemy forces attempting to raid the homelands of Britain."

Paris Dispute On ECA Aid Is Minimized

Paris, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Greece, Turkey and the Anglo-American zone of Germany have objected to their small allocations in the first year of Marshall Plan aid, a spokesman for the Economic Cooperation Administration said today.

But, he said, there is no basis for reports that the original plan is breaking down.

"Out of the many countries sharing in the aid, it is a wonder that there haven't been more to object," the spokesman said, adding that ECA would listen to no appeals until the European Organization for Economic Cooperation has made its final allocations.

Greece and Turkey have received military assistance in addition to Marshall Plan help.

Hungarian Reporter To Face Peoples' Court

Budapest, Hungary, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—The minister of interior announced today that Aurel Verannai, Budapest correspondent for Reuters, will be tried before a peoples court for filing allegedly false news reports.

Verannai was arrested in late July after filing a story reporting that Victor Csornoky, son-in-law of former President Zoltan Tildy, had been shot in the leg by police while trying to escape them.

WCBM Asks Full 'Contempt' Details

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP).—The judges of the Criminal Court were called on today to furnish details and particulars to radio station WCBM concerning the contempt of court proceedings recently instituted against it.

WCBM, four other Baltimore radio stations and a radio news editor were cited by the court to show cause why they should not be held in contempt as an outgrowth of their broadcasts of news stories of a local murder case.

The court charged they violated a court rule restricting publication of news of crime cases.

The citations were couched in the most general terms. The court explained that no details were given on grounds such statements would violate the spirit of the court rules.

Trial in the murder case is scheduled for September 20. The defendant, Eugene James, a janitor, is charged with the knife slaying of 11-year-old Marsha Brill.

The stations were requestd by the court not to make their answers until after the James trial.

The Baltimore Broadcasting Corp., operator of WCBF, today asked "specifically and exactly what broadcasts" are meant in the language of the citation, and asked specifications as to what language was deemed objectionable and what the court meant in citing the station for its "reports concerning alleged conduct and action of and by one Eugene James."

The demand also called on the judges to state specially what rule or rules of the supreme bench of Baltimore, if any, constitute the grounds for the citation.

Judge Edwin T. Dickerson extended until 30 days after the particulars are furnished, or the demand ruled on, the time for the contempt case to be answered.

Oil Shortage Ended, Trade Journal Says

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 17 (AP).—The Oil and Gas Journal will report in this week's issue that "the oil shortage is over."

An analysis of industry statistics made by the trade publication shows "there is plenty of gasoline for the remainder of the touring season and there will be ample supplies of heating oil in all parts of the country next winter."

Another Rare Type of Blood Identified in Baltimore Case

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP).—Medical science had one more clew today to why some blood transfusions are unsuccessful. It's another rare type of blood.

The new type contains an "HR double prime" factor and proof of its presence stems from the same ward in a downtown Baltimore hospital which a decade ago produced the first "RH case."

Identification of the factor was set up by Dr. H. Raymond Peters, physician in chief of Mercy Hospital here, and Dr. Alexander S. Wiener, blood group authority of New York.

Existence of the new blood factor—estimated to occur in only one out of every 240,000 cases—was first postulated by Dr. A. E. Mourant of London.

Dr. Peters and Dr. Wiener report their findings in the current issue of American Journal of Clinical Pathology.

They tell of a patient in Mercy Hospital who had undergone several transfusions over a period of years. Her history also showed a number of stillbirths.

Despite the cross-matching of her blood with that used in the transfusions—even the RH factor matched—her reactions became increasingly severe.

Dr. Peters sent a sample of the blood to Dr. Wiener in New York. There it was tested with a serum extracted from the blood of the patient who had provided the only similar case in medical history. This case had been reviewed by Dr. Mourant, who had suspected that the first patient also had a rare blood factor.

Dr. Wiener reported the Baltimore woman's blood matched that of the London patient.

Serologists estimate that only one out of every 240,000 persons have blood of the HR double prime variety, but Dr. Peters and Dr. Wiener report two persons have been found who act as safe donors.

Tuck Declines To End Milk Commission

Richmond, Va., Aug. 17 (AP).—Governor Tuck today declined to act on a request from Newport News that would, in effect, have put a nend to the State Milk Commission.

The Governor was asked by Newport News Attorneys F. Lee Ford and Victor P. Wilson to proclaim an end to the 1934 act that established the commission.

The attorneys, acting for a group of milk consumers, informed the Governor that the act creating the commission provided the agency could be disbanded when the mum and maximum prices on emergency was declared at an end.

Under the law, the milk commission is authorized to fix minimilk.

Referring to the fact that bills to abolish the commission had died in the House of Delegates, the Governor wrote to Ford that "it is the apparent desire and will of the Legislature that this act continue in force.

"In view of these circumstances, I am of the view that it would be inappropriate for the executive, regardless of his authority, to act contrary to the expressed wishes of the members of the General Assembly."

Norfolk Food Dealers Request Dissolution

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 17 (AP).—The dissolution of the Virginia Milk Commission or the addtion of two members representing the consumer was urged today by the Norfolk Food Dealers Association, which opposed recent milk price increase here authorized by the commission.

India Reported Agreeable to Kashmir Truce

New Delhi, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Authorative sources indicated today India would accept "with reservations" United Nations commission proposals for a cease-fire in the princely state of Kashmir.

At the same time, an official announcement said Indian Premier Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru will attend the U. N. General Assembly session in Paris September 23, "if circumstances permit."

It was understood Nehru would appear before the Assembly to plead India's case in Kashmir and other points where India and Pakistan are at odds.

Informants said the government appeared ready to accept a cease-fire provided all Pakistan troops and "raiders" were withdrawn from Kashmir, while Indian troops remained "to maintain law and order."

Pakistan has indicated it would accept a cease-fire provided Indian as well as Moslem forces were withdrawn from Kashmir. It was believed Pakistan will insist on a U. N. observed plebiscite in the predominantly Moslem state.

Havana Seizes 4 More In $500,000 Robbery

Havana, Cuba, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Police Chief Gen. Hernandez Nardo announced today that four more persons suspected of robbing the Royal Bank of Canada here of $500,000 last week had been arrested and more than $70,000 recovered from them.

The arrest of one suspect and recovery of $20,700 was announced yesterday.

East Europe Shuns Session Of Red Cross

Stockholm, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Facing an apparent boycott by Russia and other eastern European nations the first of some 500 delegates from 54 countries gathered today for the opening of the International Red Cross Conference Friday.

Russia, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Romania did not reply to invitations. Albania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Yugoslavia declined.

Yugoslavia denounced the presence of delegates from Fascist Spain. That was believed to be the cause of the eastern boycott.

Count Folke Bernadotte, president of the International Red Cross, returned here for the conference from his special assignment as United Nations mediator in Palestine.

He will preside over discussions on the atomic bomb and how the Red Cross can help prevent an atomic war, and debate on a civilian convention for war aimed at protecting civilians from torture, forced labor, deportation and imprisonment in concentration camps.

Canadian Wheat Crop

Ottawa, Aug. 17 (AP).—The 1948 wheat crop for Canada is estimated at 372 million bushels, the Bureau of Statistics said today. This is 31 million bushels greater than last year's crop and about 35 million bushels below the 1938-47 average.

tate. The main gate was taken from its hinges. Visitors walked around the grounds and the mansion. Littleton did not appear. Deputies were there to protect the property.

One of them, C. F. Reed, said that about 5 p. m. after the main crowd had left, he stayed around the house and observed through a window a man and woman inside. He said he walked around both sides of the house and found a side door open.

Reed said he went in and along the corridor, came upon Littleton, facing him with a pistol in his hand. After identifying himself, Reed said he and Littleton looked through the house, but found no one. Reed said he believed the man and woman went out a door while they were searching the house.

Gate Locked Monday

By Monday the gate was locked and carried this sign: "Ladies and Gentlemen Do Not Trespass. Follow Their Example." Another sign said: "It Is Not Determined by Survey These Houses Are on the 1725 Acres Advertised as Open for Inspection. Farm Entrance Elsewhere."

Officials indicated belief a further court order would be issued to open the place for inspection August 24.

Littleton, Loudoun County native, bought Oak Hill with his wife after a business career in New York. After the purchase, Oak Hill was in the news in 1923 when dinosaur tracks were found on stones being used to pave a porch. In 1930 Littleton was reported to have refused a $700,000 offer for the place from the late Andrew Mellon. At various times he kept dairy cattle and sheep. He has lived alone there for some time.

The mansion, designed by Thomas Jefferson and built under supervision of James Hoban, designer of the White House, was completed in 1823. It stands on top of a wooded slope, with a wide-ranging view over the rolling acres of the estate.

Selling Desks, 'Not Teachers,' Red Embassy Says to Queries

By John London
Post Reporter

The Soviet Embassy here welcomes dollar offers for school desks and blackboards, but not questions about the closing of the embassy school where the equipment formerly was used.

So a reporter learned yesterday.

Some 50 standard desks, at $5 each, and "many" blackboards, are available for sale. They were used by children of Soviet diplomats in the embassy school at 1304 21st st. nw., until it closed last June.

No Word About Teachers

When a reporter telephoned the Embassy chancellery to find out what had happened to the teachers, he was told by Miss Nina Trofimova, a secretary:

"Difference it does not make. Desks we are selling, not teachers."

"Is it true that about half a dozen teachers sailed home last month from New York?" Miss Trofimova was asked. Her reply was noncommittal, along the lines of "making no difference."

In response to a query as to why the school was shut down, Miss Trofimova referred the reporter to Venjamin N. Matchavariani (listed as third secretary at the embassy). He alone could answer the question, she stated. Unfortunately, she said, he was out of town.

However, it was not forbidden that the reporter should see the desks which he did, in the garage of the liquidated school.

No Hammers or Sickles

The desks were made in Waukegen, Ill., a battered label indicated. Also, it was observed, Soviet children have the American weakness, adopted or imported, of scribbling names and initials and unflattering images of teachers, on desk tops. One desk also bore two scratched stars. No hammers or sickles were in evidence.

In June, the Soviet Union indicated it was abandoning its policy of maintaining schools in foreign lands for children of Soviet diplomats, because of difficulty in getting teachers and suitable facilities. The education hereafter will take place in the homeland.

Closing of the New York school for Soviet youngsters led to the international incidents involving Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina and Mr. and Mrs. Michael Ivanovitch Samarine, teachers who decided to stay in this country.

Girl's $20,000 Depends Upon War End Date

The date on which World War II ended will determine whether a Government girl gets $20,000, according to a District Court suit filed yesterday.

The action is brought by Miss Lucy Eckl, 2110 19th st. nw., a clerk with the Reconstruction Finance Corportation. The defendant is Reliance Life Insurance Co. of Pittsburgh.

Miss Eckl said through her attorneys, Godfrey L. Munter and Roger Ratcliff, that on May 4, 1942, her fiance, E Buffler, 37, of Florence, Ala., made her beneficiary of a $20,000 life insurance policy. He died on August 21, 1945, while an Army sergeant on Samar Island in the Philippines.

Subsequently, according to the suit, the defendant paid her $3,311.88 which was the amount of premiums paid in. But they refused to give her the $20,000 face value of the policy.

The reason was the policy's "War Risk Exclusion" clause. It provided that the company was not liable if the person insured was in the armed forces of a nation at war.

But, said Miss Eckl, the Japanese government unconditionally surrendered on August 14, 1945, and on August 15 all hostilities ceased. Therefore on August 21, 1945, when Sergeant Buffler died, the United States had been at peace for a week and the insurance company cannot rely on the "War Risk Exclusion" clause, according to the suit.

Pay Hikes Go To 6000 Hotel Workers Here

Some 6000 union employes of 21 leading hotels here received pay increases and employer-paid group insurance under terms of a new two-year contract announced yesterday.

Employes who receive no tips, and who make less than $40 a week, will receive a 5 per cent wage increase; those making between $40 and $55 will get a $2 a week raise, and those employes who make more than $55 a week will get an additional $3 a week.

Tip-receiving employes, who were granted a 3-cent hourly increase under a previous contract, received no new increase.

A provision in the new contract includes free group insurance for employes, to be paid entirely by the employers. The insurance will provide for death, sickness, accidents and hospitalization benefits.

The contract, agreed upon Monday night by union and management officials, becomes effective August 20 and expires September 20, 1950.

Another provision in the announced contract refers employe-employer complaints to the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service for arbitration of disputes. One man would be appointed by the service to settle disputes, as compared with a former three-man board set up the management and union.

Hotels covered by the new contract include Ambassador, Annapolis, Burlington, Carlton, Continental, Hamilton, Harrington, Hay-Adams, Houston, Lafayette, Martinique, Mayflower, New Colonial, Raleigh, Roger Smith, Sheraton, Shoreham, Statler, Wardman Park, Washington and Willard.

Good Hope Hills Tenants Oppose Increase in Rents

Tenants of the Good Hope Hills Apartments, testifying at a hearing on proposed 16 per cent rent increases for the 412 units, complained yesterday of inadequate heat, hot water and repair service.

About 45 tenants appeared at the hearing before Examiner Denis K. Lane to object to rent increases asked by Waverly Taylor, Inc., owners of the Southeast project.

The increases, if granted, would raise the cost of a 3½-room unit from $62.48 per month to $72.50, and the cost of a 4-room unit from the present $67.15 to $78.50.

Paul H. Clark of Apartment No. 2 at 3052 30th st. se. said he had occupied his apartment two winters and that "heating and hot water has been unsatisfactory throughout both."

"I've had guests there at 9 o'clock at night that have been forced to wear overcoats," Clark testified.

Leslie Quant of Apt. 2 at 3209 Buena Vista ter. se. testified that plaster had fallen from his living room ceiling and that there were "big cracks in the bathroom." Falling plaster and inaedquate redecoration were subjects of complaints by all seven tenants who testified.

Testimony from owners of the project yesterday said that cost of maintaining and operating 412 units of the project had increased by $64,000 since 1943.

A hearing on rent increases of about 12½ per cent for 30 additional units of the development will be held today at 9:30 a. m. at the Rent Control Office, 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw. All 30 units are located in a building on the 2900 block of 30th st. se.

Apartment Units Granted Increase

A rent increase of nearly 10 per cent has been granted by the District of Columbia Rent Control Administration for 96 apartment units at 200 Massachusetts ave. nw.

The apartment owners, the District National Securities Corp., had petitioned the administration for a 15.05 per cent rent increase because of a rise in taxes, maintenance and operating costs since January 1, 1941.

The rent hike allowed by Examiner William F. Mansfield will bring an aggregate annual increase of $5286. It will raise monthly rentals from $35 for 2 rooms and bath per month to $38.50 and rents on 3-room and bath units from $55 to $60.50.

Sassy Simian Takes a Flier

SHINES — Jiggs, a combat-seasoned monkey with more than 300 flying hours, who saw wartime mascot duty aboard a Navy bomber in the Southwest Pacific, found life too peaceful yesterday. So he untied the knot in the rope about his middle and disported himself in the neighborhood. After much excitement and no little consternation among police, Jiggs was returned to his perch on the backyard fence. His master, Charles Seay, 26, former Navy flier, of 1403 Buchanan st. nw, says his pet is "an unusually tame fellow," although police declare Jiggs bit two children during his brief freedom

Fairfax School Board Joins County in Extra Session Plea

Two members of the Fairfax School Board yesterday were named to join a county delegation calling on Virginia's Governor Tuck Thursday for emergency school legislation.

Appointed during the regular school board meeting were members George T. Reeves and Alex L. Haight.

With probably 10 members of the Fairfax School Emergency Committee, they will call on Tuck at his office at 10 a. m. in Richmond to ask for a special session of the Virginia Legislature to provide school funds.

Representing the Fairfax Board of Supervisors at the conference will be Maurice W. Fox. Both the school board and the supervisors have asked for the special session.

Committee Vice Chairman Omer L. Hirst said the group would tell the Governor that Fairfax County needs more than seven million dollars to complete its present school construction program.

Hirst said the Governor will be presented signatures of 1400 qualified county voters backing the special session call.

In the school board meeting yesterday, members agreed reinforcement of the cracking rear wall of the Madison Elementary School in Falls Church would be necessary.

Letters from two architects who inspected the cracks were read, both advising use of "tie rods" to brace the wall to steel floor beams under the nearby auditorium floor.

The board, however, deferred action until it could secure the opinion of Falls Church Building Inspector N. G. Daavid, who had advised use of both tie rods and several butresses along the wall.

Arlingtonian Fined $10 for Battling Police

The degree to which a man's home is his castle was considered yesterday in Arlington County Court as a 230-pound, 67-year-old painting contractor drew a $10 fine for battling four policemen.

The contractor, Thomas B. Murray, said the four had entered his house without a warrant the night of July 30 and had beaten him over the head with a night stick. It required seven stitches, he added.

But Policemen Rene Coleman and Joe Kane said they had seen Murray hurl a heavy flower box at his wife, Mrs. Ethel Murray, on the driveway of their home at 1523 N. Veitch st. before the fracas began. The missile missed, they added.

According to Coleman and Kane, when they entered the house to find out what the trouble was, the husky Murray demanded they produce a warrant, then struck and floored Kane.

Kane struggled to his feet, clipped Murray on the head with his billy, later called in two more policemen to subdue and handcuff him. Police said Murray had been drinking.

On the stand, Mrs. Murray denied the flower box had been thrown at her. She said her husband merely was tossing it on a rubbish pile.

Protesting that "a man's home is his castle," Defense Attorney Alfred Trueax charged yesterday that Murray had been arrested in his own home without a warrant.

Quoting lines to the effect that "the sun can enter and the rain can enter, but the King of England can't enter," Judge Hugh Reid declared the whole incident had been "magnified," and imposed the nominal fine. Trueax noted an appeal.

District Bar Examination Passed by 235 Candidates

Names of 235 successful candidates for admission to the District bar, 20 of them women, were announced yesterday by the committee on admissions and grievances of District Court.

A total of 362 persons took the bar examination last June 16, 17 and 18, Committee Secretary George W. Dalzell reported. He said that 64 per cent of the applicants passed.

Among those who were admitted was James M. Landis, one-time dean of the Harvard Law School and Civil Aeronautics Board chairman until his term expired December 31, 1947. Landis is now a New York associate of Joseph P. Kennedy, former United States Ambassador to Great Britain.

Veteran's Widow Passes

Another successful candidate was Mrs. Ellen Lee Park, 31, whose lawyer-husband, Lieut. Houston S. Park, jr., was killed in action on Saipan. Mother of a young child, Mrs. Park graduated in May as valedictorian of National University School of Law.

John J. Barse, 23-year-old son of Chief Justice George P. Barse of Municipal Court, was also admitted. Barse, a graduate of Georgetown Law School, is law clerk for his father. Another who passed was George F. Riseling, son of John J. W. Riseling, night city editor of The Washington Post. Riseling is also a graduate of Georgetown.

Miss Doris G. Wilkins, long-time social welfare consultant for Landlord and Tenant Court, and

Landis Mrs. Park

Local Guide

If you have been wondering how to locate Douglas Park, Trinidad, English Village, Wilton Woods, Morningside or Tysons Corner, you will find the National Geographic Magazine's new pocket map of suburban Washington a handy source of information. One has only to glance at the index and follow the symbols to locate the Franciscan Monastery, Congressional Airport, the Bureau of Standards, Kingman Lake, or any other spot of special interest. In addition to the highways, railroads, rivers and parks that are usually outlined on maps, this interesting chart of the Washington area shows built-up areas, woodlands, monuments, institutions and orchards and gives the elevation of each area.

Washington has been under a single local government since 1871, but it is still a city of subdivisions and neighborhoods, many of which retain the names that were given them before they became incorporated in the city proper. In nearby Maryland and Virginia are also dozens of communities that are little known to the average District resident. Without expert directions it is like hunting for a needle in a haystack to seek out Glenarden, Temple Hills Park, Phelps Corner, Walhaven, Chestnut Hill, Ballston, Parkfairfax, Bradley Hills, Garrett Park or Wyngate in the maze of subdivisions that now make up Greater Washington. It is precisely such expert directions that the National Geographic map affords in handy form that is scarcely less useful to old-timers than to newcomers.

Candidate Truman

In signing the anti-inflation bill the President issued a campaign document which stood in demagogic contrast to Senator Taft's philosophical summing up. His requests to Congress were based on the need to fight inflation, but they were equally compounded of inflationary and deflationary measures. They constituted, in other words, anything but a policy. It was as if the President had called the legislators together to combat a poison and at the same time had spread before them the kind of dainties which would have made it worse. On high prices the Republicans are vulnerable as the party that killed price control prematurely, but the Administration is not without blame, for the same eagerness came from the Administration as from the Republicans to get rid of controls before reconversion had been completed. It was Judge Vinson, for instance, who as Secretary of the Treasury urged the end of the excess profits tax that Mr. Truman asked the special session to restore.

"If the plain people," in Mr. Truman's language, who have to bear the brunt of the inflation were asked to name their major complaint, they would doubtless name the high price of food. In this respect, natural forces are now coming to their rescue. Is either party willing to do something about price supports on the farm and thus let the influence of natural forces be felt? The GOP by its record shows that it is not, and the President, by his emphasis on price control—which are intended to soften the impact of such supports—shows precisely the same reluctance. Price control and rationing would not bring prices down, nor would they insure distribution. On the contrary, they would feed scarce products into the black market, and so put up prices and increase the distance between the housewife and the food she needs. On top of this, the type of regimentation which the President now wants is, as Mr. Truman himself once said, the police state in action. Mr. Truman would have made a more respectable case against Congress by hammering at its failure to put through a program of public housing and slum clearance. But, as in his original message, he is out to appeal to the people who would have benefited by the enactment of his special measures. The public interest seems to have been thrown out the window for the duration.

Armour's Departure

Mr. Norman Armour has slipped out of town almost unnoticed, having wound up a 33-year-old career in the diplomatic service, his last post being that of Assistant Secretary of State. It was like him to go without any fuss or feathers. His modesty is as becoming as it is unusual, and adds flavor to a record which has been worthy and honorable. He has been a sightseer of and participant in much history. As a secretary in Moscow he watched the street fighting which ushered in the Russian revolution. Thirty years later he found himself in Bogota in a similar, though not so historic, situation. He was at lunch at the Hotel Continental when the mob invested the hotel and started to pillage and destroy, and kill. His first thought was of the embassy, and he set out to walk there, attended by danger at every step. When he and his group arrived, it was found that the Ambassador was absent. Mr. Armour took charge, and his calmness and authority assuaged any fear on the part of the staff and promoted self-help and cooperation in meeting the emergency.

Mr. Armour was the kind of diplomat of whom visiting Americans were always proud to find as their Ambassador. At all his posts he elicited respect. A man of courtesy and consideration, of distinguished presence, he made friends for America, though he never shirked whatever disagreeable duty he had to do in forwarding American policy. Unlike many emissaries, he represented his country, not the country to which he was posted, and certainly not himself. He was a representative in the truest sense of the word. His post as Assistant Secretary of State in charge of all the geographical desks is now vacant. It is said that it will not be filled, because the organization of the State Department is becoming more and more based on specialization. The need nowadays is for men who know this or that expertly. But some of the wide-ranging knowledge which Mr. Armour acquired from his rich experience and which his natural gifts tempered into ripe judgments would not come amiss amid the seething and striving and self-centeredness of the specialists.

Spy Legislation

The nub of the problem of clarifying the espionage laws is to get around the provision which puts the burden on the Government of proving intent to injure the United States or to aid a foreign power. One or the other purpose has to be demonstrated in order to get a conviction. Perhaps it will always be difficult to show intent to injure the United States, but intent to aid a foreign power is not so difficult to establish.

What is a foreign power? Not necessarily a state, surely; it is just as much the Communist Party, which as the bull of excommunication against Tito reveals, is subject to the orders of the Comintern. Miss Bentley says that most of her informants thought they were supplying data to the Communist Party, not to Soviet Russia. This is cited as showing the way that the espionage laws may be reduced to a dead letter. But the obstacle can and should be removed. This could be done, as we have many times suggested, by having a test case brought against a Communist official under the McCormack Act calling for registration of agents of foreign principals. The recent Cominform-Tito scrap provides a fresh dossier of evidence of the relation between Communist Parties and the Cominform. If the case for registration is proved, then the Cominform is presumably given the status of "a foreign power" within the meaning of the espionage laws.

But this is evidently too simple for the Administration. It wants to take advantage of the spy scare for the purpose of legislating fresh restrictions on the access to news for press and radio. In some current "think" stories officials are reported to have hinted that executive departments should be given a broader authority in classifying information "secret" or "confidential." It is said that anybody having this material in his possession as well as any Government official giving it out should be made liable to prosecution. Some so-called precedents are cited by way of justification. One official, with a sensibility dead to the bill of rights, thinks of information in terms of a bottle of liquor or a firearm. Under the Volstead Act the mere possession of liquor used to be a crime; under the Sullivan law in New York mere possession of firearms is another. What a commentary on values!

We make so bold as to say that the main trouble about official information is not under-classification but over-classification and lack of progress in declassification. In our letter columns historians from time to time have testified to it. They cannot write their histories. Journalists have complained, and at present a committee of the Society of Newspaper Editors is looking into the problem. Reporters are finding doors barred, and information meager, and in the last month the greatest news gathering organs of America have been forced to print American news from foreign sources in order to keep their readers informed.

There is nothing new in the effort to produce a muzzling order; it is the old one that is constantly being worked over in the Department of Justice. Perhaps the worst effort was that of Francis Biddle as Attorney General. In 1942 his bill would have subjected reporters to penalties up to two years in prison and $5000 fines for willful disclosure of any official file, document, letter or memorandum declared confidential by law or administrative fiat. The Roosevelt Administration had the nerve to send the bill to Congress. This was, of course, wartime, and the Truman Administration, when its turn came, did not go so far as the Roosevelt Administration, but it went some distance. A scheme hatched last year would have classified as confidential all "information the unauthorized disclosure of which, although not endangering the national security, would be prejudicial to the interests or prestige of the Nation, any Government activity or an individual, or would cause administrative embarrassment or difficulty."

These days are golden opportunities for the censor-minded, men who don't like the light, officials who want to cover up shortcomings or misfeasance. And, with a sense of proportion rapidly going out the window, they might succeed. Those who try to stop them may find themselves dubbed as Communists because the object of restriction, of course, is to prevent information from getting to Moscow. The fact is that had a law of the nature that is now under discussion been on the books in the twenties, Secretary Fall might have escaped punishment and the reporters who exposed the Teapot Dome scandal could have been sent to jail. Is the alternative to taking a risk of a leak or two to Moscow the creation of a chasm between Government and people and the condemnation of the people to Stygian darkness? Surely not. The American people in these hysterical days have need to apply to such proposals as are now bruited the fundamental lesson in life—that the lesser evil is by extension the greater good.

Congressional FBI?

Senator Wiley is toying with an idea of far-reaching potentialities. He suggests that Congress set up an investigative arm responsible only to the legislative branch but utilizing FBI-trained personnel. His objective seems to be to aid Congress in reasserting its policy-making function and to bring about a larger measure of cooperation between the Legislature and the Administration. The Senator speaks of an expert body capable of making "a national audit not only of misuse of economic funds by the executive branch, but an audit of the entire attitude, of the entire political trend of Government agencies in the conduct of public affairs."

While the Senator's language is fuzzy, the justification which he offers for this "investigative arm" suggests that he has in mind a second FBI answering to Congress alone. If that is the case, the suggestion seems to us a most unfortunate one. The lack of cooperation between the White House and Congress is unquestionably a grave problem, but it could not be remedied by building up a rival FBI. The hostility that now marks the relations between these two branches of the Government is almost certain to be eliminated or greatly diminished by the elections in November. The winning presidential candidate usually carries a majority in Congress with him. And even if control of the Government were to remain divided along party lines, it is impossible to see how a congressionally-directed FBI could induce cooperation between the two political branches.

Probably it is more reasonable to interpret Senator Wiley's statement as a warning against the continuance of uncooperative policies. He is certainly right in saying that the Founding Fathers "never contemplated that the three independent branches of government would be in three separate air-tight compartments." While separate as to authority, "there was to have been real cooperation and collaboration between them." In other words, any information of the type in question that Congress ought to have should be obtainable from the existing FBI. There is no necessity of setting up a legislative FBI that would be certain to clash with the present agency. We have one government, as The Washington Post has often emphasized, and not two.

What the investigating committees of Congress do need, as Mr. Wiley has also pointed out, are expert staffs to direct their inquiries. Such staffs can be built up without in any degree duplicating the work of the FBI. Some authorities think it is feasible to train a group of investigators who could be shifted from one committee to another as the need arises. In any event, the need for a larger number of expert investigators serving the committees of Congress has been well established. Here is the area in which congressional leadership toward more useful investigations can be most profitably employed.

Bathing Beauty

Photographs of shapely young women wearing one-piece bathing suits and dental ad smiles are now competing in the public prints with the grim faces of accused spies and traitors and of worried diplomats. Every hamlet and city is choosing its candidate for the Miss America title; every community fair, picnic, or other celebration now follows the established custom of choosing a beauty queen. These photographs—"art" as their makers call them—are annual reminders of the change that came to the American social scene after the First World War. This year the news attention given to a clerical protest over a young woman's participation in a Miss America run-off recalls the social controversy caused by the first bathing beauty contest 27 years ago. Out of that event developed the one-piece bathing suit, which was to become an American institution, as well as a subject of moral debate. Contestants in the first preliminary bathing beauty pageant held in Washington, in August, 1921, had worn tunic bathing suits and long stockings. But at Atlantic City the following month the one-piece bathing suit made its debut and rocked conservative society in the early years of the jazz decade.

In time, however, the Miss America contest became so generally accepted that college girls entered it. Last year a Sunday school teacher walked off with the title. Hence the recent threat of a bishop to excommunicate a young member of his flock if she entered a Miss America preliminary made many front pages. While this was not enough to deter the young woman, it brought into the open a rash of criticism of bathing beauty pageants as "pagan." This might indicate that the post-war right wing trend in American life is bringing in a more conservative—and less revealing—concept of feminine beauty. However, potential Venuses need not worry greatly. The bathing beauty cult is too deeply intrenched in American social life, in retail merchandising, the resort business, photography, movies—and now television—to be easily routed.

"Labor At The Opera"

Your editorial on the Metropolitan Opera (August 12) serves to remind a negligent Government of the serious threats to the cultural life of its citizens that its very unconcern and inactivity have long since created.

While I totally concur with you that the "Met" should explore all possible sources for covering their deficits before closing, it must be conceded that this exploration should find its most generous source in the healthy vaults of the United States Government. This is a golden opportunity for the Government to begin atonement of its past negligence and actually begin showing a concrete concern for the perpetuation of all fine arts. It is doubtful in face of rising price that the company and its employes can reach an immediate settlement, and thus as an intermediary, the Government is afforded an opportunity to make a heroic rescue.

As Others See Us

I have lived in this city as well as in this country for more than three years and have made numerous friends. Contrary to Mr. Englishman, (letter appeared July 27) my impressions of Washington have been very favorable. First of all, the people here are sincere, courteous, helpful and particularly friendly toward foreigners. When I first came here, I was a perfect stranger, not knowing how to go from one part of the city to another. Yet not once did I get lost on may way to any place, for I was sure to find someone on the street showing me the right direction with kindliness and smiles.

Mr. Englishman did not like this humid heat. Nobody did or does. And exactly because of this trying weather, he found "few laughing faces or good humor in Washington." On the whole, the Americans are cheerful and gay and possess a lot of good humor.

It is true that some restaurants serve their customers with extravagant portions. However, we must bear in mind that many people have excellent appetites. Will they not complain if they were served with meager portions? I have lived with American families and I cannot but admire the economy of food practiced by the housewives in spite of the fact that we are living in a country of plenty. In a word, we shall be doing the Americans injustice by comparing the conditions we see here with those in war-torn countries.

Americans In Korea

The American withdrawal from Korea to begin next month is a subject which calls for careful and deep study by both Americans and Koreans.

Because of Russia's threat against the infant republic of Korea by the Russian-trained north Korean Communist army, the American forces in south Korea should remain there until the Korean republic becomes strong enough to defend itself in case of an attack by an aggressor. President Rhee's expression of desire, at a news conference on August 5, for the American forces to remain in Korea for a while longer reflects the views of all Korean nationalists.

People who make such statements as, "From now on, what happens in Korea is a United Nations problem, not solely an American-Russian one," know as the whole world knows that the United Nations has so far only moral persuasion in a world which still relies too much on brute force and too little on justice and moral law.

Security Lethargy

The present revelation of a so-called spy ring in our Government agencies is viewed not only with interest but also with considerable annoyance and disgust. Not that such activities should not be ferreted out—far from that—but it is a well-known fact that there are numerous employes of other governmental agencies of nearby Washington whose loyalty checks have "bounced" and whose dismissal was urged by the FBI; yet these people still are on the payroll, and no attempt has been made to remove them.

Such lethargy is abominable and should not be tolerated! Why do the mills of security grind so slowly? Why hesitate to discharge these people? They can secure employment elsewhere easily; so let's clean house, and hurry up about it, too.

Wife For Uncle Sam?

One day we were confronted suddenly with the question of whether Uncle Sam also represents American womanhood. My suggestion that Uncle Sam, as symbol, was both woman and man was greeted with grins. Our consensus was that there should be a symbolic lady to pair with Uncle Sam. Do you agree?

Labor Draft Poll

I challenge the conclusion of the August 13 Gallup Poll on "Civilian Job Draft" and the method by which that conclusion was reached.

We have never heard of a civilian labor draft seriously advanced by any responsible person since the abortive attempt to put such a law on the books in the Seventy-ninth Congress. Consultation with the chiefs of the staffs of each of the congressional armed service committees and a check with their legislative calendars reveal that no bill providing for such a law was introduced in the Eightieth Congress.

It becomes apparent that no specific proposition, or bill, with the attendant limitations which invariably encluster any law by the time it has passed the gamut of legislative procedure, could have been submitted to those questioned. So that the question in substance is vague, insubstantial and "iffy."

All the "ifs" moreover, with the exception of one, are overlooked in the phrasing of the question. The expressed "if" is in "if they are needed." A question like that answers itself, and in only one way, positively. The Gallup pollsters could get the same percentage of people to agree to give you their watches "if they are needed."

The truth is that the American public doesn't know how it feels about a labor draft, because it has been neither proposed, explained or debated recently. When that time comes the Gallup Poll might try again. And our hunch is that they won't ever find definite American approval for their proposition. Free labor has never willingly submitted to the whip.

Mr. Collins' Testimony

The account that I saw in your paper of August 12 of my testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities on August 11, failed to quote from my prepared statement and thus gave, I felt, a distorted version of the event. I would appreciate it if you would print the statement.

Your story also referred to my post as executive director of "The American Russian Institute, an organization named by Attorney General Tom C. Clark as subversive." On August 6 the institute mailed for release on August 9 a statement quoting from a letter from Mr. Clark stating that the institute had never been on the "subversive" list. Mr. Clark has also written and made public a letter to Mr. Seth Richardson, chairman of the Federal Loyalty Review Board, to the same effect.

HENRY H. COLLINS, Jr.
New York.

Statement before the House Committee on Un-American Activities on August 11, 1948:

My name is Henry H. Collins, jr. I was born in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1905. The first I knew that my name, or a name similar to mine, had attracted the attention of your committee was when I read the newspapers last week. I do not remember ever having met any man named Whittaker Chambers. I have never engaged in espionage for, nor been an agent of a foreign power. I do not believe in the overthrow of the Government by force or violence or by any other means. As far as I know, I have never violated any law of the United States. On the contrary, I have endeavored to the best of my ability, conscientiously and actively, to serve my country both in peace and war.

Hence, my public career of some 15 years. This began under President Franklin D. Roosevelt whose progressive social ideals I espoused and worked for. Prior to that time, I was in private business. My ancestors came from England to this country in 1640. Members of my family have served our country in every war since the Revolution when one of my great-uncles was an aide to Washington. I myself volunteered in the last war and spent two years in the European theater. I received a commendation for my work in the Battle of the Bulge, three ribbons and five battle stars.

My support of the policies of Mr. Roosevelt is well known, as are my politics, and my party affiliation is registered properly and I hope privately in the courthouse of the county where I vote. My chief outside hobby for the past 10 years has been abolition of the poll tax. Any system that sends a man to Congress with the votes of only 2 per cent of his people does more to undermine Americanism in this country than anything I know of. To try to correct this evil I have offered testimony before House and Senate committees over the past 10 years; and I shall be glad to do so again. I trust this blot on our country will be outlawed by the next Congress.

I resent the fact that my name and the names of others have been defamed by the unfair methods of this committee in publicizing irresponsible accusations. Every person mentioned in these hearings is pilloried in the headlines from coast to coast, even if his connection with an accuser or an accused is as casual or social as was the visit of the member of this committee who was a dinner guest at my home. I do not believe that a person can effectively protect his good name before this committee in view of its tactics.

On advice of counsel, I shall refuse to answer questions regarding the accusations which have been made against me, and shall rest on the constitutional rights of every American guaranteed by the fifth amendment.

Educational Throwback

By Malvina Lindsay

Three R's Agitation

IN SEVERAL PARTS of the country are reported parental eruptions over the "different" ways children are being taught in school. Back to the three R's is the battle cry of these protesting school patrons. Many of them want children taught as they were taught—to read, write and spell with technical precision, to know the multiplication tables and the capitals of the States. They want them to study out of readers, grammars and geographies, and to get definite markings in definite studies and in deportment—not in such abstractions as "cooperation" and "courtesy."

Educators, who have been trying to answer the demand coming from all sides that children be educated to get along in today's world, now fear this reflex movement, which has both an emotional and a financial basis, may bring about a serious setback to teaching methods in many communities. They recognize they have been dilatory in making parents understand why teaching today has to be "different." Hence they are now trying, in addition to their other multifarious tasks to explain modern education more fully to school patrons.

Cries for a return to the three R's aren't new. They rise periodically. But the present commotion seems especially vigorous. Many causes lie back of it. One might be the accumulated exasperation of businessmen who deal with clerks and stenographers weak in spelling, punctuation, arithmetic, and with seemingly no knowledge of grammar.

HOWEVER, more directly back of the present revolt is the taxpayers' pocketbook. In many instances much of the uproar against today's teaching methods has come from taxpayers who don't have children in the school system. Increased school levies have started them looking for "fads" and "frills" to blame. Playgrounds and recreation programs are examples of things that cost money and that were lacking in the childhoods of many critical school patrons.

There is also today general irritation over social and economic change, and its attendant challenges. Yearning for the old-time schooling is included in the present nostalgia for the old, isolated, rural America. Then there is the greater bother and expense to parents of modern school projects, which are designed to develop the child personally rather than cram him with facts. Naturally, the parent thinks, "Why does he need all this when I didn't have it?"

To this, the educators reply: "Yes, teaching is different today but so are most other things, houses, clothing, food, travel, communication. Children today have new demands and responsibilities to meet. They have more things to learn in order to live in a more complex world."

"Also," add the educators, "we know a great deal more now about human beings and how they learn. We know that learning must be a part of the experience of the child and that the emphasis in teaching must be on the child himself rather than on what he studies."

HOWEVER, extensive efforts are being made to find out what are the common needs of children of today. Are they more of the three R's? Or more of what disgruntled taxpayers call the "frills," as music, art, science, the technique of getting along with people?

A delving into that problem has been made by a group of leaders in elementary education representing 17 national organizations, both lay and professional. Out of its recent studies and discussions as to what constitutes a good educational bill of fare for all children has come the conclusion there are no "main" subjects for children and no "special" subjects, but that every field of learning contributes to the experience a child needs in order to live most effectively.

This group agreed on 10 types of such experience that a child of today should have. They were:

Developing efficiency in the basic communications and mathematics skills.

Learning techniques of group planning and problem solution. Making and taking responsibility for decisions.

Being an effective member of a group.

Using resources in the environment to solve important problems.

Participation in community activities appropriate to child's growth and development.

Developing skill in critical thinking relative to both the printed and spoken word.

Participation in evaluating experience.

Building a wide range of interests.

Development of personal and social values.

This list, meant only as a guideline to a curriculum, shows that those most experienced with the education of children do not slight the three R's, but rather give them their proportionate place in the process of learning how to live.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Protecting The Western Heritage

Marquis Childs is exploring the great new empire of the West. He is analyzing firsthand the relationship between this vast new development and the rest of the country, and observing just how politics in this election year will fit into the picture. This is the second of a series.

McCALL, IDAHO.—Riding along a narrow trail on Sheepeater Ridge, we could look off across mountains and valleys for perhaps 70 miles and see not a single sign of human habitation. For the city dweller it was a remarkable experience—the vast emptiness of the wildneress country preserved in the Payette National Forest.

Childs

You could imagine something of what the men and women must have felt who first trekked across the great West. Out of sight and out of sound are the noisy instruments of our so-called civilization. Not a telephone. Not a radio. Not a sight nor a sound of that dubious invention—the internal combustion engine.

WE CHARTERED a plane that flew us into a pocket-handkerchief landing field—a mountain meadow—tucked away in the valley alongside the Big Creek ranger station in Payette Forest. Then a truck took us along a crude road for a few miles.

At the end of the road were the horses and the pack mules. Within 10 minutes we were "away from it all," in what is in a sense unexplored country. On the map we carried was a warning not to count on its accuracy, since it was based on inaccurate estimates.

Of course, we were tenderfeet. Because we could hire a good guide and packer, thoroughly familiar with the trails that thread in and out of the mountains and valleys, and a camp cook skilled in the ways of this country, we were in safe hands.

But even so, we could get a feeling of what wilderness America was like—its majesty, its grandeur and the sense of hope and promise for the future that thrilled those who first saw this country. And we could have some understanding of the vital importance of guarding what remains of the treasure of the West.

THAT TREASURE, far more precious than the billions in gold and silver taken out of Western mines, is in the wooded slopes of the mountains, in the lush grass of the high mountain meadows, in the streams that run clear as glass down to the lowlands. It is in the trout that live in the streams and in the herds of elk and deer that roam the dark forest of pine and spruce.

In those elements are the guarantee of permanance for the thousands of irrigated farms and the new industries in this developing region. If they are destroyed, then the base of life is destroyed. Pessimists such as Bernard DeVoto have said that the West can become a desert in a century if further inroads are permitted in the heartland that supplies life-giving water to valley and plain.

Even the tenderfoot can see what it would mean if sheep and cattle in greater numbers were permitted to graze in the national forests of the West. The granitic soils at 7000 and 8000 feet are as porous as sugar. The sharp hooves of sheep would push that soil into the creeks and the creeks would be slowed and the high slopes would be eroded away.

That would be the beginning of the end. It happened in the uplands of Spain and in China, and we know that the end is desert, abject poverty and blank hopelessness.

Guardian of the high heartland of the West is the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture. In administering the national forests, the Forest Service has one of the stiffest and most exacting jobs in Government. It covers a vast physical area and it collides with some of the hottest politics in this region.

The constant enemy is fire, and an enemy harder to combat and equally threatening is the insect pest. On the ride from Fish Creek to the Chamberlain ranger station we went through miles of lodge-pole pine felled by the timber beetle. It looked as though a tornado had swept past.

This complicates the task of keeping the trails open and it adds enormously to the fire hazard. Westerners sometimes feel it is a losing battle and that the cattle and sheep might as well be turned in to get the good out of the grass.

The pioneer spirit is strong even though pioneering days are gone and with them 85 per cent of the virgin timber that was once part of Idaho's "limitless" wealth. The pioneer resents restraints. He wants to fight it through in his own way.

But there is growing up here in the West a body of opinion that recognizes the vital necessity of guarding the heartland. It is strong among sportsmen, farmers, and many ranchers, too, and, of course, among conservationists who have taken part in the fight to save the heritage of the empire of the West.

U. S., Canada Renew Plans For Defense

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 17 (U.P.).—The United States and Canada today repledged their mutual defense cooperation amid top level talks on joint action in the event of any future emergency.

United States Defense Secretary James Forrestal traveled here from Ottawa with Canadian Defense Minister Brooke Claxton to participate in a ceremony rededicating United States-Canadian joint defense cooperation.

But shortly before the ceremony Forrestal left suddenly for Washington. His aides gave no explanation for his early departure.

In Washington the White House denied a report that Forrestal had been summoned home for an urgent conference with President Truman.

Says He Returned on Schedule

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said Mr. Truman has not called Forrestal back. There has been no urgent meeting, Ross said, and no such meeting is planned.

Forrestal also issued a denial when he arrived by plane at 6:10 p. m. He said he had returned to the Capital strictly on schedule, that there were no emergency conferences scheduled and that he was going home to dinner.

Today's ceremonies climaxed two days of Cabinet-level discussions on Canadian-American defense. It was learned that the conferences dealt mainly with joint action in any future emergency, with top priority given to three projects:

1. The role of Canadian manufacturing plants and raw materials in any military emergency.

2. Interchange of weapons and ammunition among the armed forces of Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States.

3. Standardization of United States and Canadian arms and ammunition.

Today's ceremonies were held on the railway station platform where, eight years ago, the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced their countries' joint plans for defense.

Claxton said the defense cooperation of the United States and Canada could be expanded to include all nations who so desired.

The recent discussions in Ottawa marked the first time that standardization of United States and Canadian war weapons have reached the top government level.

Canada traditionally has patterned her military equipment after that of the United Kingdom.

D. C. Employes To Sign for Draft on Job

With registration of men from 18 through 25 to begin in less than two weeks, the Commissioners yesterday approved a plan to register draft-eligible District Government employes where they work.

The plan, submitted by Draft Director William E. Leahy, calls for registration of policemen at their precinct stations, firemen at their fire houses, and for city employes at the District Building and Municipal Center.

A registration setup for transients will be established in the first floor corridor of the District Building, Leahy said. It will be open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily and Saturday from August 30 through September 18, the registration period.

Leahy estimates that "a minimum of 1000" of the 16,000 District workers are eligible for the draft. To register them, he plans to appoint registrars who are employed at the firehouses, precinct stations and the District and Municipal buildings.

The D. C. draft chief already has lined up more than 15 of the city's officials to register their draft-eligible employes at work. He issued another call yesterday for volunteers to assist in the registration.

Original plans, Leahy said, would have effected registration of Federal employes at work, but the Federal Personnel Council, a group of personnel directors, vetoed the idea. As a result, Federal workers will register in schools.

Leahy also announced that the Commissioners will receive on Thursday names of 25 men to staff the final five of the District's 15 draft boards. The Commissioners approved personnel for 10 draft boards and three appeal board panels last week.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Case Of Mrs. Smith: I

MRS. ANN SMITH, a former clerk-stenographer for the United States Navy in the Canal Zone, is not herself an important political figure. But what has happened to her, and the way in which it happened, is important—deeply important—in these times.

Mrs. Smith (which is not her real name) is a personable young woman in her late 20s, a Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Southern California, mildly liberal, mildly intellectual, mildly interested in the problem of race relations. After an unhappy marriage in California which ended in divorce, she took a job in 1945 in the Panama Canal Zone as a Navy clerk.

Her interest in the race question was partly responsible for her also taking on a part-time job teaching English after working hours at the University of Panama. She had received permission to do so. But the classes she taught were largely colored, and racial feeling in the Canal Zone runs high. There were certainly those in authority who frowned on Mrs. Smith's after-hours' work and on her tolerant racial views.

WHETHER THIS had something to do with her subsequent experiences, no one knows. At any rate, in 1947, she met Petty Officer Robert Brown, and they decided to marry. Brown applied for permission to marry from his commanding officer, Admiral J. F. Shafroth. Then the blow fell. Permission was refused, on the grounds that the intended bride was suspected of disloyalty to the United States.

This was in August, 1947. In September, Brown's locker was searched in his presence, his personal papers were read, and a copy of Generation of Vipers, a rather dull but by no means Marxist book by Philip Wylie, was confiscated.

Nothing more happened until January. Despite repeated requests for a decision, permission for Brown to marry Mrs. Smith was still withheld. Then, on January 30 of this year, Mrs. Smith was presented with an "interrogatory," consisting of some 21 questions.

Some of these questions are routine, others are peculiarly interesting. Mrs. Smith was asked whether she read, among other publications, The New Republic; whether she was acquainted with "persons you know to be connected with labor activities and labor leadership in the Canal Zone"; whether she had "exchanged views on political, governmental, or international subjects with persons connected with the University of Panama," and whether she had in her possession "books or literature concerning the government of the U. S. S. R."

The implication of such questions is both clear and shocking: It is simply that anyone capable of intellectual curiosity is automatically suspect. If this is to become an accepted principle of American Government, it is a chilling prospect. At any rate, Mrs. Smith admitted only that she had once subscribed to In Fact some years previously, and that she had occasionally leafed through a copy of The New Republic. On every other score, she protested her innocence.

A SECOND category of questions concerned Mrs. Smith's acquaintanceship with four individuals. One was a Negro minister in California. Mrs. Smith had, she said, never heard of him, although it is difficult to see how it would have mattered if she had, since the minister is an anti-Wallace Democrat and a delegate to the recent Democratic Convention. The second individual was a woman who had been active in radical student movements in California, in the '30s, while Mrs. Smith was going to college. Mrs. Smith asserted flatly that she had never heard of this woman either.

She had known the third individual, though only briefly. On vacation in Guatemala, she had been assigned to share a hotel table with him and his wife for three meals. More than a year before the date of the "interrogatory" he had sent her some newspaper clippings and a copy of PM. As for the fourth individual, a woman who lived in the Canal Zone, she and Mrs. Smith had both attended a luncheon given in Balboa by the Unitarian Church, which Mrs. Smith attended regularly. But Mrs. Smith had not, to the best of her knowledge, been introduced to this woman and she did not know her.

Having answered the "interrogatory" frankly and fully, Mrs. Smith felt certain that the whole troublesome business would at last be cleared up, and that Brown would be allowed to marry her. Then, on March 17, she received a memorandum from Capt. W. F. Weidner, USN. The memorandum, citing no evidence to that effect, bluntly charged her with having lied consistently in her answers to the "interrogatory," and with disloyalty to the United States.

The case of Mrs. Smith would not, perhaps, be worth reporting if these were different times, or if hers were an isolated case. But these are times in which traditional American liberties are closely threatened. And, as will be shown later, what happened to Mrs. Smith in the Canal Zone has happened to too many others elsewhere. In the year 1948, it is the plain and necessary duty of the American Government to protect itself from attack from within. But a great deal, a very great deal, depends on the way in which this is done. Therefore, a second report in this space will shortly be devoted to describing Mrs. Smith's subsequent history.

Meat Dealers Bewail Prices, Claim Summertime Losses

Philadelphia, Aug. 17 (AP).—The men who sell the meat were singing the blues today almost as loudly as the housewives who buy it.

The Evening Bulletin said a survey of Philadelphia meat packers, slaughterers and jobbers showed that many dealers are finding business so bad they would close shop if they didn't expect some improvement by fall.

"It's not profitable to do business on this market," said Sam Cross of Cross Brothers, a large dressed-meat firm. He added that virtually all dressed-meat firms here have been operating at a loss during the summer months.

Embargo Lifting Boosts Canadian Meat Prices

Windsor, Ontario, July 17 (AP).—Canadian housewives today began to sense the frustration that has gripped their meat-conscious sisters in the United States.

Accustomed to relatively low meat prices, they watched the price of beef rise toward United States levels. Lifting of a six-year embargo on Canadian shipments of cattle and dressed beef to the United States was given as the reason. Beef here went up as much a. 10 per cent in 24 hours in smaller stores.

Anonymous Group Hits 'No-Meat' Campaign

Cincinnati, Aug. 17 (AP).—An unidentified group of Cincinnatians, opposing the Consumers Conference, sponsors of a "no-meat" campaign here, has launched a telephone campaign urging normal meat purchases, the Cincinnati Times-Star reported today.

The newspaper said a member of the new group had described the organization as the "Common Sense Buyers' League." It seeks to keep meat prices down and "avert higher prices in the future" by normal buying, the Times-Star reported.

The Gallup Poll

Sentiment for Price Control Up From 39 to 56% Since April

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 17.—Although Congress brushed aside President Truman's request for limited price controls, there has been a sharp increase of public sentiment in favor of controls since the special congressional session was called.

In April, a public opinion survey found the country opposed to restoring rationing and price controls on any products. Today the majority feels that such action should be taken on certain products, chiefly foods.

President Truman's call to Congress to deal with prices apparently had a marked effect on the public attitude. If the President makes an appeal for limited controls in his campaign speeches, he is likely to get a sympathetic hearing from his audiences particularly in the big cities. Among the city consumers, especially the housewives, sentiment for price controls is overwhelming.

The coast-to-coast poll by the Institute was on the following question:

"Do you think the Government should or should not put back rationing and price controls on some products?"

Should	56%
Should not	35

Those who favor controls were asked to name the products they had in mind. The principal items named were meat and other kinds of food, butter, clothing, shoes, milk, automobiles, bread and flour.

When a similar poll was taken in April the vote was only 39 per cent in favor of restoring controls, while 52 per cent were opposed and 7 per cent expressed no opinion. An additional 2 per cent favored price controls but not rationing.

	Should	Should Not	Qualified and No Opinion
Farmers	41%	49%	10%
Towns under 10,000	55	35	10
10,000-100,000	57	33	10
100,000-500,000	62	30	8
Over 500,000	63	29	8

Some economists have argued that one of the major reasons for today's high food prices is that the Government guarantees the price of wheat, potatoes and other products, thus allegedly boosting the cost to the consumer. To what extent does the general public believe this, and how many voters would approve cutting down these price guarantees?

This formed a second question in today's survey, and the answers revealed a sharp cleavage of opinion between city and farm.

"Some people say that one of the reasons prices are high today is because the Government guarantees the price of wheat, potatoes and other crops to farmers. Would you approve or disapprove of cutting down the amount of these guarantees to farmers to reduce food prices?"

The national vote is:

	Approve reduction	Disapprove	No opin.
Farmers	26%	62%	12%
Towns under 10,000	48	37	15
10,000-100,000	53	33	14
100,000-500,000	50	36	14
500,000 and over	48	33	19
National	46	39	15

The above table clearly indicates the dilemma which political leaders face in the 1948 presidential campaign—the clash of interests between the farm voter, who wants high prices for his products, and the city voter who wants low prices for the things he buys from the farmer.

Real Estate Bond Prices Firm in Year

By S. Oliver Goodman

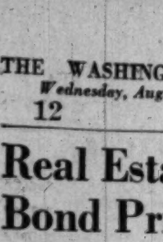
Real estate bond prices have shown noteworthy firmness in the first seven months this year, according to the Amott-Baker index of 200 Eastern issues which includes four Washington issues.

The average price of a $1000 bond on July 30 was $784, as compared with $786 on June 30 and $783 on December 31, 1947, the index shows.

In the classification by type of property 26 apartment hotel issues advanced 0.6 per cent last month; 36 apartment building issues were 0.1 per cent; 28 hotel issues were also up 0.1 per cent; 87 office building issues were down 0.2 per cent; 9 theater issues were off 0.1 per cent and 14 miscellaneous issues declined 0.1 per cent.

As a result of the July dip the real estate bond market has receded to approximately the level from which it started the year, the difference being only 0.1 per cent on the upside.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Noah Brinson has been appointed Washington general agent of the American President Lines. He succeeds



BRINSON

Joseph F. Gillen, who has returned to APL's New York office as assistant to the general manager of Eastern territory. Brinson, a retired Army colonel, served as assistant chief of staff from 1936-44 at the Presidio of San Francisco and later was chief of staff of the Ninth Infantry Division. Since January, 1946, he has been assigned to the War Department and the United States Airforce as liaison officer with Congress. Brinson, 48, is a 1924 graduate of West Point.

CONTINUED GAIN: July sales of Washington Gas Light Co. totaled 7,057,400 therms, a gain of 3.77 per cent over the same month last year. For the first seven months sales aggregated 99,081,655 therms, an increase of 18.61 per cent over the like 1947 period.

INVENTORIES: Stocks of goods on hand June 30 in Washington department stores were 7 per cent higher than on the same date last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond noted last night. Regionally, inventories average 8 per cent heavier. Local collections on charge accounts in June were 48 per cent of those due on June 1, slightly better than the Fifth Reserve District's average of 45 per cent. Local store sales for the first six months were reported 4 per cent improved over the like 1947 period, compared with the region's 5 per cent sales upturn.

DIVIDENDS: Directors of Woodward & Lothrop, Inc., have declared regular quarterly dividends of 50 cents a common share and $1.25 a preferred share, both payable September 28 to stock of record September 16.

THOSE FREE MEALS: Personality versus profits might be the title of this debate. Last year the airlines, with one exception, operated $21,069,586 in the red. Tom Taire, publisher of the trade magazine Airports and Air Carriers, points out that last year the airlines gave away more than 10 million dollars in free meals. He calls that "sloppy business practice" when you're losing money. W. A. Patterson, president of United Air Lines, disagrees. Patterson says charging for meals would take the personality out of air travel.

ANOTHER PEAK: The National Industrial Conference Board estimated that its consumers' price index would reach a new record high of 165.1 for July. The index, for which the base month of January, 1939, equals 100, rose to 164.1 in June of this year. The board said preliminary data indicate the index climbed 0.6 per cent from June to July. During the period food rose 1.2 per cent, bringing that preliminary index figure to 224.5 for July.

EARNINGS: Eastman Kodak Co. reported net income of $28,017,774 for the first six months this year, equal to $2.24 a common share, compared with $20,29,661 or $1.62 a share in the same 1947 period. Other earnings reports:

Jet Airplane Engine Made For Civilians

North Tonawanda, N. Y., Aug. 17 (AP).—Development of a turbo-jet engine small enough for civilian use was announced today by Frederic Flader, Inc.

The engine, designated the XJ-55-FF-1, is being produced for the United States Air Force. Its performance figures are secret, but a company spokesman said, "The engine, hardly larger than a stovepipe, exerts a thrust powerful enough to propel an airplane at high speed."

The company hopes to have the engine released for civilian use. It claims the engine is powerful enough to fly a four-or five-passenger private plane at a cruisng speed of 250 miles an hour.

"With improvement in fuel economy, this will open up a new market in private aircraft sales for persons who want fast transportation and use in business," said the spokesman

Call Money Rate Boosted to 1¾% By One N. Y. Bank

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—Chase National Bank, one of the largest in New York, has raised the interest rate on call money from 1½ to 1¾ per cent.

This is the first increase in call money rates since the summer of 1946 when they were raised from 1 to 1½ per cent. It was not known whether other banks would make the same upward revision.

Call money is the term applied to loans to brokers which are secured by customers' collateral.

The volume of such lending currently is said to be small compared with what it was in the late 1920s and early 1930s. Borrowings for securities transactions have been reduced substantially, since margin requirements were raised to 75 per cent.

At the end of July such loans totaled 375 million dollars compared with the 1929 peak of $8,600,000,000 and the low of 241 million dollars in 1932.

The rise in the call money rate follows upward adjustments in the interest rates on loans to business and on short term Government securities. Last week the Treasury said the interest rates on certificates would be raised from 1⅛ to 1¼ per cent on October 1.

Iran May Displace Soviet as Third Biggest Oil Nation

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Oil Forum said today that Iran is likely to overtake the Soviet Union before the end of the year and become the third largest oil-producing country in the world.

The trade publication noted a continued steep rise in production in the Persian Gulf.

It is probable this trend will persist, the magazine's monthly review said, if the present fluid tanker market continues.

The Forum reported a faster tempo in the world's advancing crude petroleum production.

Daily output in May for the 44 countries surveyed averaged 9,238,116 barrels, a new record and 1.6 per cent above April.

Greatest increases were reported for the United States, Middle East and East Indies.

New production records were set by British interests in Iran, the Forum said, by American interests in Saudi Arabia, and Anglo-American cooperative effort in Kuwait.

Also setting new highs were Venezuela, the Soviet Union and Canada.

Business Outlook

Who's Wrong? Wall Street Or Corporation Presidents?

By J. A. Livingston

ROBERT H. COLLEY, president of the Atlantic Refining Co., is but one of many examples. Gwilym A. Price, president of Westinghouse Electric, is a second. Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel Corp., is a third. They're men who make their own decisions, undeterred by the "bloodless verdict of the market-place"—the Wall Street market-place.

Livingston

Colley put it extremely well in a recent letter to Atlantic Refining shareholders. He pointed out that the oil industry needs new capacity, but that it cannot obtain all the capital needed to build new plant and equipment by floating securities.

Therefore, Atlantic is expanding on its own power. In the first six months of this year, Atlantic retained almost 9 out of every 10 dollars earned. Similarly, Westinghouse Electric retained about 7 out of every 10 dollars. In the old days—in 1928 and 1929—it used to be the other way. About 6 or 7 out of every 10 dollars earned would go out to stockholders as dividends.

Colley explains that the "highly profitable prices paid to the [oil] industry by its consumers may be looked upon as a mandate to the industry to build its capacity to . . . enable it to supply whatever quantities of petroleum are desired."

MANY ECONOMISTS would debate that thesis. They might bow to Colley's judgment that the oil industry "could not expand during the war and now must make up for lost time," but they would not agree that high prices are a mandate for expansion. Prices are merely an expression of how much the public will pay for petroleum products at the moment. Right now the traffic—not only in petroleum, but also in meat, autos, and nearly everything else—pays a heavy price. It's a seller's market.

Historically, Wall Street called the signals—gave the mandates—for expansion. When investment bankers and the investing public regarded the outlook for a company favorable, they bid up the price of its stock. The company then was able to float stock on good terms. Historically, if investors and speculators figured that the entire country was headed to bigger and better profits, then the entire market rose. And most companies could sell securities.

WALL STREET sends out no such signal today. Wall Street seems decidely dubious about expansion. Now common stock issues are not in demand. To that corporation executives have a ready answer. The market is under the influence of (1) Russia, (2) the '29 crash and the deep depression, and, of course, (3) high taxes which make men of wealth unreceptive to common stocks as long-short-term investments.

So, American corporations have been digging down into stockholders' jeans without formal permission. Last year, corporations retained 11 out of 17.8 billions of profits, paid out to shareholders only 6.8 billions. They're now spending about 19 billions a year on new plant and equipment—an unexampled sum. It compares with 8 billions in 1941 and 5 billions in 1939.

The corporation manager is painfully aware that if he were to pay these earnings as dividends he'd not be able to entice them back with a new stock issue. That's partly because Uncle Sam would take a cut of the dividends in taxes; it's partly because Wall Street is unoptimistic. So he holds on to the earnings.

THUS, THE CORPORATION manager in this postwar era is not willing to risk the verdict of the market place. He's not willing to sell common stocks at current levels. Instead he's substituting his judgment on what's good for his company and the country for the outside judgment of Wall Street.

That raises this question: Why then doesn't the stock market keep pace with profits. Obviously the corporate manager must feel sure that Wall Street is underpricing his stock and his company's future. Otherwise he'd not plow back—bet—his stockholders' money on the future. Therefore, you'd expect him to be buying stocks, which ought to buoy the market.

Perhaps James W. Angell has an answer to the paradox of a dull stock market during a capital goods boom. In his book, "Investment and Business Cycles," he points out that the businessman is predisposed to view his own particular enterprise "kindly and perhaps over-favorably." That encourages the businessman to plow back his stockholders' money in his own corporation, but does not carry over to investing his own money in other corporations.

Glen Burnie Man Dies From Own Car Crash

John Grund, 50, a carpenter of Glen Burnie, Md., died yesterday at Prince Georges County Hospital, Cheverly, Md., of head injuries suffered Monday when his car struck a tree on Defense Highway, Md.

Prince Georges County police who investigated said the victim may have suffered a heart seizure just before the crash. Dr. J. T. Maloney, county medical examiner who issued a certificate of accidental death, ruled death due to the injuries.

In traffic accident action in the District yesterday a coroner's jury exonerated Raymond T. Frazier, 24, 1754 Columbia rd. nw., streetcar motorman, of the death of Miss Nan Whitehead, 29, secretary to a radio station disc jockey.

Miss Whitehead of 2441 40th st. nw., was fatally injured last Friday when struck by a southbound streetcar at 14th and G sts. nw. She died Sunday at Emergency Hospital.

Witnesses at yesterday's inquest said the victim, secretary to Bill Herson of Radio Station WRC, stepped from a streetcar loading platform into the path of the streetcar. The jury ruled death was accidental.

Every 36 seconds fire breaks out in the United States. Every two minutes an American dwelling catches fire. Every 50 minutes a person dies in a fire or from burns.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 17 (AP).—Grains carried an easy tone during the greater part of today's Board of Trade session, and settled to the day's low at the close.

Price changes were not great. The session was dull and without features.

At the close wheat was ¾ to 1⅜ lower than yesterday's finish. September, 2.22. Corn was ⅛ to 2 cents lower, September, 1.63⅛@1.63. Oats were ⅜ to ¾ lower, September, 73⅜@73½. Soybeans were 2 to 3½ cents lower, November, 2.58½, and rye was 1½ to 2¼ lower, December, 1.74½.

Trading in corn was heavier than in other grains. September corn broke under selling pressure by cash and commission houses. Favorable weather and crop reports continued to exert a trading influence. Some traders expressed the opinion that producers will dispose of old corn and feed the new crop, at present premiums.

Brand-new Power
in a matter of hours

Give Your Prewar Buick TODAY'S Fireball Zip and Power with a Completely Factory-Fresh Engine

No, there's no point in merely wishing you had all the peppy power of a brand-new 1948 Fireball engine under the bonnet of your trusty old Buick.

Not when you can dish yourself up a full portion of the same thrilling liveliness—in a matter of a day or so.

All you have to do is come in and see us. We can put a fresh-from-the-production-line 1948 Fireball engine into any Buick from 1937 models on. It's a completely new Buick engine—spick-and-span from head to pan—fully equipped with all the items listed in the panel.

As if by magic, you cancel out the thousands of miles of driving you've done. Cross off the leaky piston rings, worn bearings, tired ignition system. Scratch the threat of a costly engine overhaul. And figure the extra worth of your car when you're ready to turn it in.

The job doesn't take long—from one to two days. The cost is OK, too—surprisingly low. It varies a bit from model to model, but it's always low enough to make this deal a prize bargain. We'll give you the exact figure if you'll drive your car in.

Don't put it off. Make up your mind to drive a 1948-powered car now. Come in and talk it over.

Comedy From England

Swords Are Sharper Than Wit at Little

By Sonia Stein

EVER tasted flat champagne? Step up and have some. "Meet Me at Dawn," which opens this morning at the Little Theater, is a bit shy on effervescence. But just as with flat champagne, you can get high on it if you stick with it.

It's a bright, slight comedy—more slight than bright. A young professional duellist in Paris undertakes an assignment for a politician: to provoke a duel with a prominent senator and put him out of commission for three months. The Paris Exposition (of 1902, in case the duelling has you wondering) is a logical scene for an insult, it seems. Morton, the daring young man, accuses the senator of molesting a pretty young thing whom he has merely offered to assist when she tumbles.

The duel ensues, with both Morton and the senator slightly wounded. A newspaper makes political capital of the incident, labeling the "molested" young lady Madame X and the senator a trifler with the ladies.

Usual Complications

By one of those coincidences peculiar to the world of literature and films, the young lady is the daughter of the editor. Her attempts to stop the smear campaign before she is identified, and Morton's attempts to have it stopped to protect pretty Gabrielle, whose identity he does not know, form part of the plot.

There's a good deal of duelling by pistol and sword, slapping of faces and romantic misunderstandings. All of this is presented in a spirit of frisky humor which hits its mark from time to time.

An Excelsior film, made in England, it stars American Actor William Eythe. He behaves inanely enough, to be sure, but youth and good looks make up for a lot.

Hazel Court makes a fetching Gabrielle. Stanley Holloway hangs around Eythe as his "second," and presumably provides laughs.

"Meet Me at Dawn" is never as gay and dashing as it means to be. But since it is not heavy-handed in its efforts, its little mistakes aren't painful.

"Shakuntala," the Indian film at the Dupont Theater, has attracted such a crowd this week that it is being held over for another week, starting today. The management assumed it would have limited appeal—it's based on an Indian poetic drama written about 18 centuries ago—but it turns out they missed their guess. The beautiful display of Indian embroideries, metallic dress goods and lavishly decorated saris will continue in the lobby.

Both "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House" at Keith's and "The Pearl" at the Playhouse begin another week today.

Burma Police Head Captured By Insurgents

Rangoon, Burma, Aug. 17 (U.P.)—Communist-led insurgents captured the Rangoon superintendent of police today in a bold attack on government motorboats at Syriam, 15 miles east of the capital, government officials admitted.

Another gang of 100 "bandits" raided villages within six miles of Rangoon, the government said.

At the same time, government forces were reported to have cleared 56 miles of the Rangoon-Prome road, closed since last Wednesday by the rebels.

The local press assured the capital's 500,000 inhabitants that the city's defenses were adequate, but tension remained high after last weekend's fighting on the outskirts.

Britain to Send More Troops to Malaya

London, Aug. 17 (U.P.)—The War Office announced today it is sending "as soon as possible" the Second Guards Brigade from England to Singapore "because of prevailing conditions of unrest" in Malaya.

Malayan troops and police, hard-pressed by well-organized gangs allegedly led by Communists, already have been reinforced by British troops and planes from Hongkong.

Jail Doors to Open For Thousands Of Azerbaijans

Tehran, Iran, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Iranian parliament approved today an amnesty measure for Azerbaijan Province at a stormy session marked by an attempt to drag Premier Abdul Hussein Hazhir from the speaker's box.

Political informants said the bill throws open the prison doors for thousands of persons accused or convicted by military tribunals of collaboration with rebels in the province which borders on the Soviet Union.

Premier Hazhir was defending the government's stand in opposing revisions of the bill when Gholam Hussein Rahimian, leftist deputy, rushed forward and seized him. Ministers and deputies pulled Rahimian away.

Chinese Yuan Forbids Strikes And Student Demonstrations

Nanking, Aug. 18 (Wednesday) (AP).—China's Executive Yuan, in a sweeping order against Communists' "second front" activities behind government lines, today banned labor strikes and student demonstrations.

The order, as reported through Central News Agency, also provided search of private residences may be made without a warrant when there is definite evidence the occupants are carrying out subversive activities.

The announcement did not say whether the order was issued under President Chiang Kai-shek's emergency powers, but it appeared that some special authorization would have been needed.

Nationalists Retake 2 Cities Near Suchow

Shanghai, Aug. 17 (AP).—A government comeback drive on China's eastern seaboard was reported today to have eased Communist pressure on Suchow, the big base 180 airline miles northwest of Nanking.

Press dispatches said separate government columns had recaptured the city of Shuyang, 50 miles southeast of Suchow, and Szeyang, Grand Canal town 40 miles south of Shuyang.

(In Washington, Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador, asked Secretary of State Marshall yesterday to help speed up procurement of American military supplies for the nationalist armies. Congress voted a 125-million-dollar grant for military aid to China this year.)

Israel Soldier Unearths Ancient Pavement

Jerusalem, Aug. 17 (AP).—A Jewish soldier digging a slit trench at Salbit near Latrun has unearthed mosaic pavement which may supply missing Palestine history of the two centuries after the birth of Christ.

Jewish archeologists said today the pavement may prove to be part of the oldest known Jewish temple. The most ancient Jewish temple now known is a sixth century structure in the Emek Valley south of Galilee.

Starling Pecks At Power Line; Cow, Bull Die Too

Era, Va., Aug. 17 (AP).—A starling pecking at a power pole set off a chain of events that cost the bird its life, killed a milk cow and made necessary the destruction of a bull.

C. R. Hooper of Crewe, manager of the electric cooperative that serves Dinwiddie County, related the story today.

Hooper said the bird sitting on a live wire, pecked at the pole, setting it afire. The fire caused the wire to fall into the pasture of T. J. Lewis, where cattle grazed. The wire struck a cow, killing her instantly. The wire also struck the pasture fence, charging it for a distance of several hundred feet.

A bull came into contact with the fence and suffered a broken leg. He was destroyed later.

The bird, Hooper said, was burned to a crisp.

Truman Calls Griffith 'Washington's Great Citizen'

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THOUGH HOLLYWOOD poured it on thickly in The Babe Ruth Story, there was core to the legend of The Babe's fondness for boys. "I was a bad kid," he wrote in the first line of his autobiography but he might have added he was the only bad kid he knew. The Babe went through life viewing every other boy as a nice kid.

POVICH

The Babe Ruth demonstrations with boys weren't ballyhoo or staged performances. A fondness for kids that had to be native with him burgeoned into a passion for doing good by them. A responsibility toward them grew amidst his own travail as bad actor in baseball, and the tough guy problem man of his manager was a push-over for a boyish face or a kid's request.

Kids were thrilled by the Great Man and his initial wonderment at that, if any, gave way to a realization that was, indeed, an idol. So great was the adulation of the Babe that he accepted himself not only as a symbol of good will toward boys, but he actually believed in later years that he possessed the power to heal. He believed the Babe Ruth pep-talk to be a blessing never to be withheld.

If the Babe's feats on the ball field were legend to this new generation of baseball fans, they were no less intriguing to today's ball playrs. As they survey the various parks and the subject turns to long-distance hitting, the question asked always is: "Where did the Babe hit 'em in this park?" And then they'd gape at the far distances as some old-timer pointed out the exact spot where a Ruthian home run had made history.

The day Ruth needed the help of two friends to lift the wasting figure of the great slugger up the steps of the Yankees' dugout last year on Babe Ruth Day, little Phil Rizzuto stared hard at the old champion. And then he said to Bucky Harris, "He must have been a big man when he was healthy." And Harris said, "He looked even bigger to us when he started handling that bat like a toothpick, and everybody was playing deep."

"Where did he park 'em in the Washington park?" Rizzuto asked, and Harris said, "Everywhere. He pulled 'em over the right feld wall, knocked 'em over the scoreboard, cleared the fence in dead center, and hit home runs into left field. I've seen him half-fooled on a pitch when he had to take a last-minute slap at the ball, and that was home run, too."

RUTH GAVE ONE unforgettable demonstration of transforming a hostile crowd into an idolatrous rooting section. That was in St. Louis in 1928, when he led his Yankees against the Cardinals in the World Series, and was greeted with the boos of St. Louis fans when he returned to his leftfield post after striking out in his first time at bat.

A home run in his second time up merely agitated the bleacherites to more action, any they pelted him with cushions, papers, bottles and everything throwable, but the Babe merely turned and grinned. And then he went in and socked his second homer, and ran into another hail of jeers and seat cushions. But three innings later after the Babe's third homer of the day went sailing onto the roof in centerfield, the bitterness melted completely and the crowd stood and cheered the man who had wrecked their Cardinals. Anthony at Caesar's funeral didn't do a better job of winning over a hostile crowd.

On one of his later trips to St. Louis, Ruth posed for pictures with Hub Pruett, now a practicing dentist, who once was famed as the Browns' left-hander who had Ruth's number. Certainly no pitcher over struck the hard-swinging Babe out so many times in succession as did the Browns' rookie. "You made a bum out of me," Ruth admitted grandly to Pruett who said, "Nobody would have heard of me, if it hadn't been for you."

FROM TIME TO TIME, the more imaginative baseball writers used to hail a sensational rookie as "another Ty Cobb," but it is significant that never was anybody ever labeled another Babe Ruth. Even the men who did threaten his home-run records were never confused with the Bambino. There was only one Ruth, and there was to be no other.

There could be no Ruth without that strangely funny gait and the small steps on feet that toed in, and skinny ankles that supported such great bulk. Nor no Ruth without that broad nose and wide mouth, and certainly there could be no Ruth without that tremendous skill at whipping a bat around and laying it against the best pitching that could be mustered.

He hit his home runs and he struck out with the same gusto, and there could be no Ruth without those spinning strikeouts, that left his legs crossed and his body wound in ridiculous postures. And you could say of Ruth, too, that his pop-ups were the highest. Of Ruth it could be said, verily, his fans were always sure of a show.

Babe Lies In State at 'His' Stadium

By Carl Lundquist

Yankee Stadium, New York, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—They brought "The Babe" home today to "The House That Ruth Built"—they carried him into the ball park in a mahogany casket and put him within easy throwing distance of the diamond where he made himself the greatest player the game has ever known.

And the crowd followed him into the towering stadium, capable of seating over 70,000, just as the crowds did in the golden age of baseball when no man asked for a greater thrill than to see him wallop the apple into the bleachers.

The fans were with him again today but today their loyalty was to his memory—they had come to pay their last tribute to the flesh which had been George Herman R..th whose mighty home run bat and lovable personality elevated him to the heights of a universally loved national hero.

Only Place Big Enough

The crowd had started gathering at noon, soon after it was announced that the Babe would lie in state in the vast stadium which had to be built to accommodate the multitudes which used to clamor to get their money down on the line for the privilege of seeing him play and which, now that he was dead, was the only place in town large enough to accommodate those who wanted to bid him Godspeed.

When the gates were opened to mourners at 5 p. m., the crowd numbered thousands and was growing by more thousands almost by the minute. It was predominantly men and boys, although there were many women—and it wasn't a typical baseball crowd. It transcended the fans of the game, just as the Babe himself was bigger and greater than the game which made him famous.

He was in a satin-lined casket, his body clad in a blue serge suit. His still face was gaunt and lined, plainly showing the ravages of cancer which killed him last night at Memorial Hospital after a lingering illness of two years.

Above him, in the stadium lobby, were life-sized portraits of the great Yankees, including one of him. Tapers flickered at the head and foot of the casket and around his folded hands, was a rosary.

The flags on the stadium roof and on the big pole in centerfield were at half-staff and the playing field was deserted. The team is out of town and no baseball will be played there until after the Babe's funeral on Thursday.

The Babe's family first planned to place the body in state at a funeral home but the wave of mourning which swept this city that he took to the baseball heights, made it obvious that no funeral home could possibly take care of the mourners.

The present owners of the two-billion-dollar baseball park which never would have been built if it hadn't been for the Ruthian drawing power, offered it for the public's final tribute and the offer was accepted.

Burial on Thursday

He was to be in state until 10 p. m. today, when the gates will be closed until 10 a. m. tomorrow

President Helps Honor Nat Owner

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Clark Griffith, standing moist-eyed amid a succession of spoken tributes, heard President Truman call him "Washington's great citizen" last night before a gathering of more than 22,000 in Griffith Stadium.

In hour-long pregame ceremonies that smacked of the high pomp of an opening game, the 78-year-old president of the Washington club was greeted by the old ball players of his pennant-winning teams of 1924-1925-1933. The Army band paraded. The crack precision drill team of the Third Infantry swung through maneuvers. On a huge centerfield screen were shown flash-backs of Mr. Griffith's 61-year career in baseball.

Baseball Commissioner Albert B. Chandler advanced to home plate to grasp Griffith's hand and pay him tribute "for a record in baseball that will never be forgotten. As long as we have men of the spirit of Clark Griffith, this country will never fail . . ."

American League President Will Harridge, noting as did Chandler his long personal friendship with the Nats' owner, praised Griffith for his contributions to baseball and brought the league's gift of a gold watch to the guest of honor.

Ceremonies Informal

Mr. Truman, a history-making President last night as the first Chief Executive to attend a night game in the major leagues, keynoted the informality of the ceremonies with his opening remarks of "I am going to request that the audience sit down as I talk."

"It is a privilege to be here on 'Clark Griffith Night' when we are honoring a hero who deserves everything he has. Mr. Griffith is a shining example of what this great country of ours can produce.

"He worked on the diamond and came up the hard way. It takes stamina and ability and Mr. Griffith has that. I salute him as a great citizen of Washington."

The President, speaking extemporaneously, reminded the crowd of its presence on a day when baseball was saddened by the death of Babe Ruth and added "I want to pay tribute to another one of baseball's greats—the late Ruth."

President's Nat Rooter

He noted the presence of the Yankees as the Nats' opposition and went flatly on record as a Washington rooter, saying "although the Yankees are here tonight and I don't want to wish them any harm, I hope Griff's team wins. . . . Thank you."

The big gathering, in gay mood that was heightened by the pregame skit of Clown Nick Altrock and Pitcher Early Wynn who stooged for Altrock's antics, unloaded its applause when Announcer Arch McDonald introduced the old-time Washington players at home plate.

From far and wide they had come to greet again their old boss. An outburst of applause greeted each presentation as Griffith shook the hands of his 1924-25-33 pennant winners. There was Fred Marberry, the great relief pitcher of 1924-25, up from Texas; Warren Ogden, late-season pitching star of '24; Tom Zachary, two-game winner in the World Series against the Giants.

They were older and paunchy now, with exceptions like Benny Tate, the little catcher and trim Joe Judge and Sam Rice. From his California ranch across the continent came little Earl McNeely, the outfielder whose "peb-

Italian Boat Arrives For Gold Cup Races

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—An Italian motorboat reportedly capable of making more than 100 miles per hour, arrived on the liner Sobieski today en route to Detroit for the International Gold Cup Race, August 28.

The sleek, super-streamlined 4400-pound craft is the property of Count Achille Costoldi of Milan, Italy. Newly constructed, the boat never has been raced before, but mechanics who accompanied it here predicted it would break all records.

Party Wasn't Exclusive

Haight Goes to the Ball Game With the President—He Thinks

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

I went to the ball game last night with President Truman. At least they tell me he was in our party. Really I couldn't swear to it.

I had just arrived from Marlboro when the boss collared me and said, "Haight, I want you to cover the President tonight, Eddie Folliard can't make it."

The President could have stopped by my house for me, I live closer to the ball park than he does. But no, I had to go all the way down to the White House just to ride back.

Anyway, I took a quick bath, got rid of Monday's 5 o'clock shadow and made it a two-shirt day even going so far as to wear a tie and a coat. I wasn't going to let the Chief Executive out-dress me with all his haberdashery background.

I had pictured myself sitting in the second car from the President. The White House correspondents had two limousines and I made sure I was in the first.

Only 15 Cars Apart

Our cars were parked just outside the 1600 Pennsylvania ave. gate. When President Truman drove out, I caught a fleeting glance at him side-view and darned if it wasn't the closest I was to him all night.

Some 15 cars were between the Chief Executive and the reporters. Despite our bad post position, I was compensated, in a measure, by being on the curb side although as we whizzed through red lights, etc. I didn't see a living soul I knew. Then, again, it was a pleasure to arrive at the stadium and not have to look for a parking place.

As far as "covering" the President was concerned, it was no dice for me. I did become something of an expert on observing the back of his head—both with and without a hat. When he addressed the crowd, I was so far back I couldn't hear a word first hand—or is it first mouth—although I could get his speech two ways, over the speaker system and through a portable radio a couple of rows back.

I found the White House fellows a likable gang. They taught me the ropes. For instance, I was whistling and a veteran reporter frowned and whispered, "If you have to whistle try something besides 'Is It True What They Say About Dixie?'"

I learned quickly.

I got the idea and, although the conversation turned to fishing when the Nats were trailing, 8-0, I didn't once mention Herring Bay. I didn't want to get dragged right out of the White House party, if you know what I mean.

Limousine Wasn't Free

The President saw the whole game, but we didn't. We were rushed out to our limousine, a half inning early and the quick move didn't improve our position in the caravan, either. We finished in last place, beaten 6 furlongs by the No. 1 official car.

Back at the White House, I got out, stretched and remarked, "I'll see you fellows again."

A correspondent shouted, "Wait a minute. You owe $3.50 for your share on the limousine service."

Next time I'm going to catch a cab and sit in the bleachers.

Don't get me wrong I like newspaper work. Where else could a guy like me stage a triple play—Marlboro to White House to Marlboro. See you on the rail.

Henrich Raps Slam Homer as Yanks Win, 8-1

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

On the night Washington paid tribute to Clark Griffith, the New York Yankees exacted tribute from his ball club.

Powered by the power-hitting of Tommy Henrich, the Yanks crushed the Nats, 8-1, before an audience of 24,000, which included Harry S. Truman, leading lefthander of Independence, Mo.

Henrich hit a grand slam homer off Sid Hudson in the third inning to send Hudson down to his thirteenth whipping of the year. It gave Recruit Bob Porterfield more than enough runs to score his first major league triumph.

Porterfield, fresh up from the Yankees' Newark farm club, stopped the punchless Nats with six hits, one of them a home run by Sherry Robertson in the eighth inning.

Henrich's grand-slam job, his fourth four-run swat of the season, tied a major league record held by five others, including two late Yankees, Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth.

Ordinarily, neither Henrich nor Robertson would have made a home run off their drives. Their wallops cleared the temporary fence in right center, put up for the evening to guard the fireworks which were set off after the game.

Catcher Gus Niarhos, who had a double and two singles for the evening, started Hudson on the way out by leading off the third with a two-bagger.

Ricky Wants 28 Games for Pros

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 17 (AP).—Twice-a-week pro football was envisioned today by two of the All-America Conference's club leaders.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Greater Buffalo Advertising Club, both Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers and Jim Breuil of the Buffalo Bills said they would seek adoption of the 28-game schedule at the conference's first winter meeting this December.

Asserting that he does not see any possibility of ending the player-salary fight between the conference and the older National Football League, Rickey said:

"So, for the moment, we're forgetting about that angle.

Police Boys Lose, 4-1 To Hutchison Furniture

Hutchison Furniture took the opener of the three-game Police Boys' Club "Junior World Series" yesterday with a 4-1 win over Police Boys' Club No. 11 on the Ellipse.

Al Martina, Hutchison hurler, had a no-hitter working until Sonny Gatewood tagged him for the team's lone safety in the seventh inning.

Bearden Pitches 4th Shutout To Boost Tribe's League Lead

Cleveland, Aug. 17 (AP).—Gene Bearden hurled his fourth shutout and Ken Keltner rapped three hits tonight as the league-leading Cleveland Indians hiked their margin to two full games over Philadelphia with an 8-0 victory over the St. Louis Browns before 55,858 Lake Front Stadium fans.

Meetmenow Likely Choice In Waldorf

Maryland's half-mile racing season reaches the half-way mark today with the opening of a 10-day meeting at nearby Marlboro. With a 2 p. m. post-time for the first race—daily double closes at 1:45—the session runs without a break, Sunday excepted, through August 28.

Despite getting off to a sour start—Jockey Benny Leggett's untimely death and the blind horse aftermath at Cumberland, the minor track circuit has been drawing huge crowds and betting is ahead of last season, a record one.

Although Marlboro's session comes a month after the closing of Laurel Raceway, this will be the first opportunity to determine if the trotters put a dent in the racing bankroll in the Washington area. Opinion is divided on the subject, some contending the Raceway made turf converts.

Full Fields Assured

Full fields limited to eight starters for safety's sake, are assured in all races today. Racing Secretary John P. Turner, jr., has an overflow of talent in each event.

With a minimum purse of $1000, today's program is featured by the Waldorf Purse at $1200. The lineup includes a majority of winners this year and several horses who made the grade on the milers.

The Allnut Stable of Rockville appears to have the probable favorite in Meetmenow, a fleet filly who carries top weight of 116 pounds and will be ridden by Jockey Raymond (Skeets) Holland. C. E. Crider's Comedy Player is the likely second choice. Rough Cloud, Majesto, Margaret E. and others are in the test of 6½ furlongs.

Variety of Racing

The card gives both sprinters and distance horse their innings. Two sprints of 5½ furlongs are listed with the routes ranging up to a mile and three sixteenths for the seventh event.

Although the joint has its usual application of whitewash, there is little in the way of improvements. This is supposed to be the final meeting at Marlboro in its 1914 setting. At the close of the session, work is scheduled to begin on new stands, clubhouse, etc., to be ready for the 1949 meeting.

Despite Lesnevich Bout

Walcott Is Still Interested In Fighting Here—For Title

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Handlers of Jersey Joe Walcott still have more than a passing interest in the proposed heavyweight championship fight here with the winner of the Ezzard Charles-Jimmy Bivins bout.

Announcement that the Tournament of Champions signed Walcott to meet Gus Lesnevich in a 15-rounder on the Zale-Cerdan card at Jersey City September 21 led to speculation that they no longer cared.

However, Felix Bocchicchio, officially called Walcott's "advisor," yesterday told The Washington Post he saw no reason why Walcott couldn't fight here October 5—if it's for the title.

Exercising a manager's prerogative of using the first person plural, Bocchicchio explained, "This Lesnevich fight looks awfully easy to us. And we couldn't turn it down—especially for $50,000.

"Jersey Joe will be in good shape and ready to go again in two weeks. And, if the title's at stake, we'll be in Washington. I feel that Walcott has everything it takes to become a champion."

Bocchicchio also emphasized that he wouldn't let the Tournament of Champions tie him up with any exclusive agreement to fight for it.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, who's trying to make the fight, refused to be perturbed over the Tournament of Champions announcement.

"I knew Bocchicchio was going to sign, but have his verbal promise that he will follow through with the bout here if the NBA recognizes it as a championship fight," Menendez said.

If necessary, Menendez said he believed he could move the date back from October 5. And the shrewd matchmaker admitted that he wasn't overlooking the fact that Lesnevich might score an upset over Walcott and planned to reach Joe Vella, Lesnevich's manager.

The NBA now is conducting a poll to get title sanction for a bout between the Charles-Bivins winner and the Walcott-Lesnevich winner. Action will be taken at the NBA convention in Philadelphia September 14. That's when the boxing organization expects to confront Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis with the leading question: "Do you plan to retire?"

Fred McLeod Is Honored by Columbia Club

The boys out at the Columbia Country Club threw a party last night for Professional Freddie McLeod and it was a pip.

Freddie is 66 years old. He won the National Open championship 40 years ago. He became pro at Columbia in 1912 and has been on the job 36 years.

After a series of speeches, Bill Miller, club president, presented McLeod with a check for $1000 from his admirers.

Freddie responded by expressing his thanks and telling the audience that it was "colder than hell" when he won the Open championship with a "floater" ball and eight hickory-shaft clubs back in 1908.

More than 200 members of the Columbia club and special guests assembled in the dining room to pay tribute to the popular little Scotsman whose consecutive service at one club probably is a record in American golf.

Among the special guests were Gen. Omar Bradley and Harry Parr 3d, Baltimore racing executive. Wiffy Cox, professional of the Congressional Country Club, was master of ceremonies.

Smith Advances In Press Tennis

Frank Pace, jr., director of the Bureau of the Budget, became another semifinalist when he won his match from Col. Haris Hull, 6—4, 6—3.

The Babe Was a Hopeless Case, Victimized By an Inaccessible and Spreading Cancer

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (U.P.)—Babe Ruth was a helpless victim of cancer from the start of his disease. He had the type of cancer that is virtually inoperable.

Such was disclosed today in the results of an autopsy performed on Ruth's body.

Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases announced officially that Ruth had died of cancer, and that the original growth was in the naso-phapharnyx, a part of the ear passages back of the nose.

Such a site is in a locality near the under-surface of the skull which is inaccessible to surgery when involved by cancer, the hospital said.

THE original site, however, was not definitely established until after death. In the closing days of Ruth's fight for life, the cancer had spread to at least three other parts of his body—the throat, the lungs and the liver.

The hospital report said that the spreading disease had pressed "upon certain nerves which emerge from the brain, one of which partly supplies the motor function of the throat and larnyx."

"Early in the course of his disease," the report said, "Babe Ruth suffered from paralysis of one of these nerves and as a result became hoarse and found it difficult to swallow."

The paralysis aggravated Ruth's condition, particularly in the last stages. It was necessary to feed him by tube.

ALTHOUGH Ruth was a helpless case, the top medical scientists at Memorial never admitted defeat—and used all facilities to save him. The prime treatments were X-ray radiation and radiation from radon seeds.

A radon seed is a small piece of gold, hollow inside. It contains radioactive radon gas, a by-product of radium. It is an effective treatment in some types of cancer when the cancer is discovered early.

Memorial doctors believe that Ruth knew he had cancer. After all, Ruth knew he was in a cancer hospital and that he was receiving the accepted forms of caner treatment.

He never asked. The doctors never told him.

Truman Calls Clark Griffith 'Great Citizen'

ble" hit won the '24 World Series and introduced, too, was Jack Bently, who made the fatal pitch for the Giants that day.

A roaring cheer greeted the figure of Goose Goslin as that colorful old outfielder advanced to meet Griffith and the crowd let loose a delighted roar when the Goose unashamedly kissed Mr. Griffith on the brow.

A special cheer was reserved, too, for Bucky Harris, manager of Griffith's first two pennant winners who was the foe last night . . . and for Coach Clyde Milan, who has stood with Griffith since 1912, but antedating them all was Trainer Mike Martin, a Griffith associate since 1904 and Clubhouse Man Frankie Baxter.

Ossie Bluege, without whom the Nats have never won a pennant, headed the Nats of 1933 vintage, followed by the current manager, Joe Kuhel. For Heinie Manush, leading hitter of that 1933 team and Earl Whitehill, top pitcher of that pennant winner, the crowd also stood and cheered, and for Pinch-Hitter Dave Harris, too.

They whooped it up, too, for the prosperous-looking chap from Boston, who was the dynamo of that 1933 pennant winner, its playing manager and all-league shortstop. It was, of course, Joe Cronin, with a hearty handshake for his father-in-law.

And still they came to shake the hand of their old boss—the Nats of later years; the twin favorites, Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis, Catcher Rick Ferrell and the champion base-stealer of the last decade, George Case, and Bert Shepard too, the war casualty who was given a chance to play big-league ball by Griffith despite a leg amputation in a German prison camp.

In a voice choked with emotion, Mr. Griffith stood at home plate to acknowledge the tributes and said "Mr. President, you have brought me one of the happiest moments of my life . . . Tonight we see much of what real democracy means . . . All of you saw those great stars of other years out here a few minutes before . . . They brought honor and glory to Washington and seeing them again made my heart stand still . . .

"I want to pay tribute now to the most loyal fans in the world . . . We've had winning teams and losing teams and you have always stuck by us. I want to tell you to stick by us and I assure you we'll have another winning team . . ." And his step was shaky, his eyes in tears as on the arms of Commissioner Chandler and Mr. Harridge he was escorted back to the White House box.

Babe Lies In State at Yank Stadium

when they will be reopened until 7 p. m.

A requiem high mass will be said Thursday at 11 a. m. at St. Patrick's Cathedral, and baseball's storied home-run king will be buried immediately afterward at Gate of Heaven Cemetery near the village of Valhalla in Westchester County.

J. Paul Carey, Ruth's closest friend and adviser said: "Babe had frequently expressed the feeling that making some kid happy was the best method of honoring a friend. If he were here today, that would be his wish; and therefore, the family respectfully requests that flowers be omitted."

Russell Anderson, 9, and Michael Pelli, 10, hadn't heard this announcement. They showed up at the Universal Funeral Chapel this morning, each clutching a tiny bouquet of flowers.

"They're for the Babe," Russell explained to the policeman at the door. The kindly cop nodded in understanding and took the flowers into the chapel.

Ruth's body was taken to the chapel in midtown Manhattan last night several hours after he died.

It was taken from there to the stadium.

Pallbearers were not immediately announced. But there will be no restrictions. The public may attend the mass, and the public may join the funeral procession through New York City to the cemetery.

No one except Carey, the Babe's wife and daughter were admitted to the chapel, but hundreds of fans stood outside.

One of those in front of the chapel was Thersa Morrin, an elderly Irish school teacher from County Kildaire. She was here on a vacation.

"I was here 12 years ago and saw Babe Ruth give some boys his autograph on baseballs," she said. "I have followed his career ever since in the Irish papers and I want to see him before I leave these shores."

At 3:30 p. m., the casket with a spray of American Beauty roses on it, was carried to the hearse. At the stadium, it was placed on a catafalque set up in the lobby, directly behind home plate, but separated by the tiers of seats. The playing field could not be seen.

New Administrator Expected to Reshuffle CAA, Revise Policies

A major reorganization of the top staff at the Civil Aeronautics Administration is in the making over the next several months. Also, a hard-boiled look is to be taken at CAA's practices and policies.

These developments are the result of the appointment of youthful Delos W. Rentzel as CAA administrator, who has a reputation of being an effective executive.

Primarily, it's reported, the reshuffling will be aimed toward placing good managers in key CAA jobs. CAA is said to have grown more or less like Topsy in the past 22 years until today it has about 17,000 employes and spends millions of dollars. A top Commerce official who confirmed the reorganization study had this comment:

"It's about time a tough administrator like Rentzel looks over CAA and decides if anything about it can be improved. We won't know until the survey is completed."

Rentzel has brought in Donald Nyrop to be his executive assistant. Nyrop is a former CAA employe and at one time was assistant to the chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board. He will work mainly on administrative matters.

It's reported that Chris M. Lample, one of the real oldtimers in CAA, has asked to be transferred to Alaska to be put in charge of two airfields there. Lample is director of the Air Navigation Facilities Service. Along with Charles Stanton, he's recognized as the father of the present airways system.

DEFERMENTS: Any day now the President can be expected to issue regulations on the operation of the peacetime draft. In doing so the President will reserve the right to issue from time to time a critical list of occupations. A copy of each list will be sent to local draft boards for use as a guide in granting deferments. In actual practice, it's expected that most of the people in the critical jobs will be deferred.

However, Federal workers won't be included on any critical list as such. Like private employes, they will be considered on an occupational basis. For example, doctors are a sure bet for the list—those in private practice as well as those in Government.

NSRB: A group of management experts will gather at the National Security Resources Board today to map out plans for an efficient and effective administration of the Government in wartime. Those who will meet with NSRB Chairman Arthur M. Hill include:

H. B. Maynard, president, National Management Council; R. R. Zimmerman and Harvey E. Bechnell of the Society for the Advancement of Management; Walter Mitchell of the Controllers Institute, Frank Hoffman of the Systems & Procedures Association, Harry E. Hansen of the National Industrial Conference Board, Charles A. Johnson of the American Society for Public Administration, and W. H. Evans of the National Office Management Association.

NOTES: Robert O' Renville is the new budget officer of the NSRB. He was assistant budget director at CAA . . . There isn't enough money in the Secretary's budget to fill the three vacant little cabinet jobs in the Labor Department . . . The President has given competitive Civil Service status to Mrs. Margaret E. Batick of Portsmouth, N. H., whose husband lost his life in a submarine . . . The Commerce Department will give in-grade promotions to its employes for superior accomplishments . . . The Senate Appropriations Committee is making a study of costs of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

LOYALTY: The Ferguson committee is said to be writing a report which will suggest that a special investigation be made of Federal workers who handle confidential and secret information. That appears to make good sense as the same sort of loyalty check is now given all Federal workers, from a forest ranger to a State Department clerk who sends secret messages in code.

But the Ferguson recommendation won't be anything new to the Administration. In fact, the President urged the Congress to provide funds to permit a full-dress investigation of every employe who was slated to be placed in a so-called "sensitive" job.

The Congress never actually rejected that part of the President's loyalty program, but it did slash his request for funds to such a point that there was no money to conduct the special inquiries.

Under the President's plan the Civil Service Commission would make an extensive check on every new employe who would be placed in a sensitive job. But if the Civil Service investigators uncovered a question of loyalty, the case would then be referred to the FBI.

There is no reason to believe that the Administration has changed its view on the need of thorough inquires of people in sensitive jobs.—but first, Congress must supply the money to do it.

Prisoner Dies

Wilton H. Morris, 52, of Norfolk, Va., a prisoner being held on a drunk charge at the cell block at police headquarters, was transferred to Gallinger Hospital last night and pronounced dead on arrival. The police homicide squad was investigating the circumstances.

Nobody Bids On $650,000 Bond Issue For County

Prince Georges Commissioners Try Negotiated Sale With 2 Concerns

The Prince Georges County commissioners yesterday began direct negotiations for sale of $650,000 worth of bonds, after scheduled opening of competitive bids failed to bring a single offer for the issue.

In regular session at Upper Marlboro, the commissioners went behind closed doors to negotiate with representatives of two concerns when it became apparent there would be no bidders by the 11 a. m. deadline, set when the bond issue was advertised a month ago.

William A. Carson, president of the commissioners, said representatives of two concerns, one from New York and one from Baltimore, offered "tentative" proposals, but he declined to reveal terms of the proposals "because they are still pending." He said the commissioners probably would reach a decision today, when they are to meet at the County Service Building at 10 a. m. for a routine zoning hearing.

In previous sales, the county has offered bonds on a competitive basis, getting several offers.

Carson declined to speculate as to why the advertisement for bids on the new bonds failed to produce any offers, but added: "I don't believe the interest rate was in any way a factor." Under State law governing sale of public improvement bonds in the county, the commissioners can pay no more than 3 per cent interest on their loans.

In Montgomery County, where a three million dollar school bond issue is planned in September, the maximum interest allowed by statute is 4 per cent.

Sale of the bonds had been planned to finance construction of street and park facilities in the section designated as the Metropolitan area of Prince Georges County, and erection of a building near Magruder Park in Hyattsville to house the Prince Georges office of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the county engineering department.

In other actions yesterday, the commissioners (1) authorized County Engineer Arthur Tayman to make a study of street and sewer improvements in Boulevard Heights after a delegation of 30 residents asked for better facilities; (2) adopted a resolution authorizing the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission to issue permits for outdoor advertising signs in the county, and (3) approved a request by the Bowie Rescue Squad that it be included in the county-wide system of volunteer fire departments and rescue squads.

2 New Polio Cases Bring Total to 68

Two more District polio cases were reported yesterday by the District Health Department, bringing the total for Greater Washington this year to 68.

Of the 68, 33 are from the District and 35 are from nearby Maryland and Virginia. Last year at this time, there were five cases in the District and eight in adjoining Maryland and Virginia.

The two new District cases were a 9-year-old girl of the 400 block of Mellon st. se., who was admitted to Gallinger Hospital last Thursday, and a 3-year-old boy, who entered Gallinger on Monday.

Meanwhile, in Virginia the infantile paralysis count reached 188 with 21 new cases reported Monday. In Norfolk County, four cases were reported and one boy died, the locality's eighteenth victim of the year. He was the State's tenth polio fatality.

Reports on 24 new cases of infantile paralysis were received by the North Carolina Board of Health yesterday. The total for the year climbed to 1520. There have been 78 deaths.

Thrasher Farm to Get Face-Lifting Today by 500 Men, Varied Machines

Dynamite to Aid Demonstration of Modern Technique In Conservation

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A 175-acre, 200-year-old Maryland farm will be made over today, with the world invited to see it done.

At 9 a.m., daylight time, the Maryland Conservation Field Day will be started with the explosion of about half a ton of dynamite.

Eight hours later, at 5 p.m., the Mrs. Nellie V. Thrasher farm, 10 miles southwest of Frederick, Md., will have been transformed from an old-type, square farming operation, to a modern, soil-conservation type of agriculture.

The dynamite will demonstrate how to build ditches without breaking your back. A drainage ditch will be constructed by the dynamite. The explosion will be the signal for one of the most unusual flag-raisings in the history of the Free State. A battery of lime spreaders will lay out the stripes of an American flag as Maryland war veterans uncover the 48 stars that will complete the picture.

The last star—the Maryland star—will be uncovered by Maryland's only living holder of the Congressiona Medal of Honor, Paul J. Wiedorfer of Baltimore.

With these formalities over, 500 neighbors of the 53-year-old widow, Mrs. Thrasher, owner of the farm, will begin their demonstrations of modern farming.

Strip Farming to Appear

Before they get through at 5, the square-field farming will be changed to modern strip farming. This means that fields will follow the contours of the hills, with a field of intertilled crops alternating with close-grown crops.

A new dairy barn, complying with the strict requirements of the Washington milkshed, will be built. Farm Buildings will be repaired and repainted. Two ponds for water storage, fire protection, and stocked with fish will be constructed.

The old fences will be removed and fences built on the contour lines of the fields put in their place. In several spots the ornamental and practical "living fence" of multiflora rose will be started.

Modern wood-lot practices will be installed. This will demonstrate the value of farm woods for providing lumber, soil-building and soil conservation.

Diversion ditches—to halt the runoff of water and permit it to seep into the ground for use when dry seasons come—will be built. Drainage of the barn lots and the home lawns will be shown and trees will be trimmed, repaired and treated.

Repairing, Painting of Buildings

The home and farm buildings will be repaired and painted. Low places will be seeded to canary grass—a hay producing crop for areas formerly wasted.

The entire farm will be limed, fertilized and put to its best usages. Permanent pastures will be installed and hay lots seeded.

Ditches will be sodded to prevent erosion. Terraces will be constructed. Permanent farm lanes will be built.

As the work progresses Edward A. Wayne, vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Va., will describe the activities over a loudspeaker, so that all visitors may know what is going on and where. Wayne, an authority on land conservation, has been a long-time advocate of the principles to be demonstrated.

A running account of the day's operations will be transmitted over WFMD of Frederick—and carried over WGAY of Silver Spring for local listeners.

Movies to Be Taken

Movies will be taken by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, and by State and Army departments for exhibition in foreign lands.

Aside from its primary purpose of attracting increased public attention to the necessity of conserving natural resources, the day will be an outstanding example of neighborly cooperation.

More than 100 machines, ranging from bulldozers to plows will be used. Many will be provided by the State and county governments—and are available to any member of a soil conservation farm.

Contour Fencing Planned

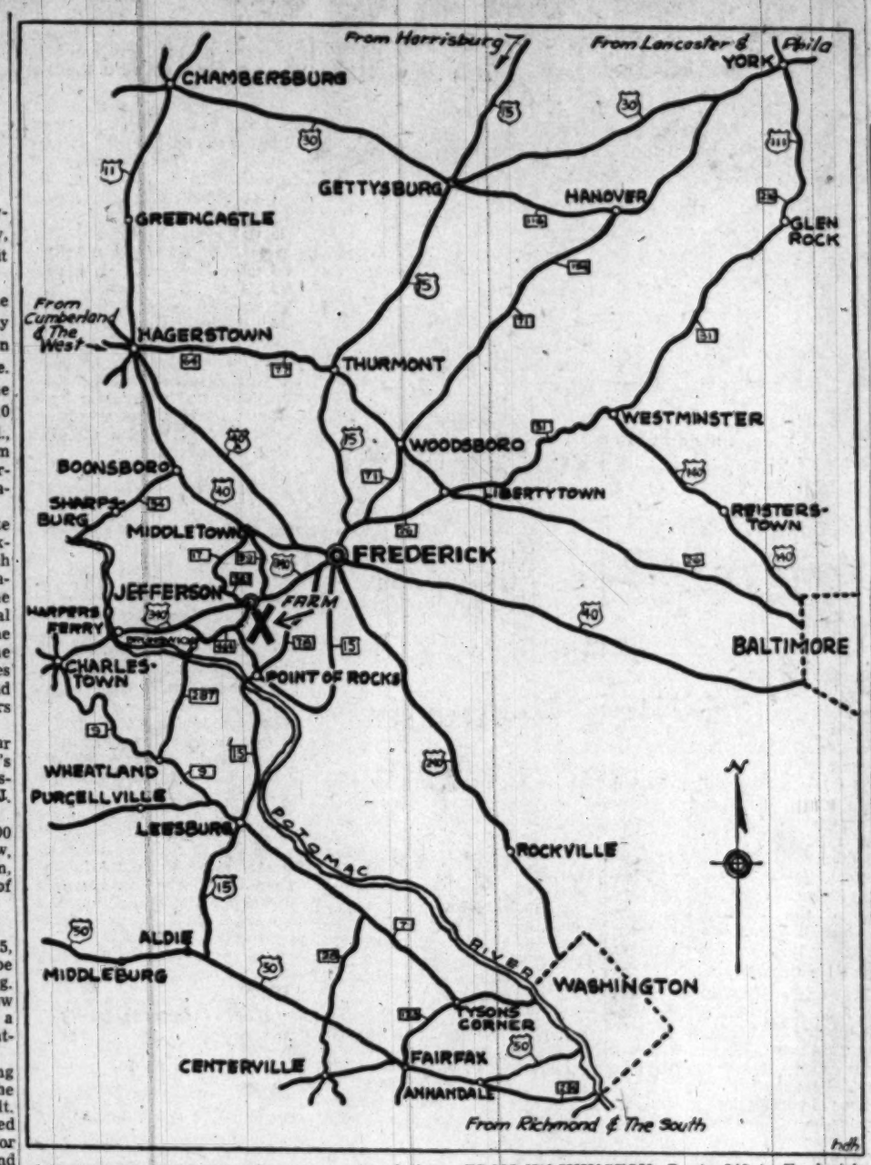
All inside fences will be removed, and more than 600 rods of contour fencing built.

Band music will continue throughout the day. No admission will be charged, and telephone, first-aid stations, food booths, sanitary facilities will be available to all.

A formal speaking program will start at 11 a. m. Among the speakers will be Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan, Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland, Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, and others. A musical and vaudeville program will mark the afternoon events.

The day's work will double the value of the farm, including a $10,000 fully equipped dairy barn, the managers of the day estimate.

Mrs. Thrasher has been operating her farm with the aid of two teen-age children since the death of Mr. Thrasher three years ago. Her chief aide has been her 17-year-old son, George E. Thrasher.



ROUTES TO FOLLOW—If you are one of the 25,000 to 40,000 planning to watch the Maryland Conservation Field Day on the Thrasher farm, 10 miles southwest of Frederick, Md., today, this may show you how to get there. Traffic will be directed on all roads by Maryland State patrolmen and National Guardsmen and roads within 10 miles of Frederick will be marked with special direction signs. Here are some recommended routes:

FROM WASHINGTON: Route 240 to Frederick, then follow the signs south on Route 340. FROM CHARLES TOWN, W. VA., crossing at Harpers Ferry on to Route 340 to Jefferson, then right to farm. FROM LEESBURG, VA.: Crossing Potomac at Point of Rocks, route will be plainly marked along Highway 464 to Route 340. Thence right to Jefferson. At Jefferson turn right, 1 mile to farm. FROM HAGERSTOWN, MD.: Route 40 to Frederick, or Old Route 40 to Middletown, then 59 to Route 340, then left into Jefferson

Nine Firemen Promoted as Two Step Out

Davis Department Deputy; Kite New Battalion Chief

The District Commissioners yesterday promoted nine District firemen to fill vacancies caused by pending retirements into top fire jobs.

Heading the list of appointees recommended by Fire Chief Clement Murphy and approved by the Commissioners was Battalion Chief Percy A. Davis, named deputy chief engineer of the Fire Department to succeed Frank G. Berry, who retires September 1.

Capt. George J. Kite was promoted to the rank of battalion chief, succeeding Battalion Chief W. C. Rees, who also retires September 1.

Named to fill the vacancy left by Chief Davis was Capt. Alfred M. Grunwell. Promoted to captains, replacing Kite and Grunwell, were Lieut. William W. Brown and Lieut. John F. Damskey. Promoted from sergeants to lieutenants were William H. Yonce and George W. Quinn. Pvts. Albert O. Reeder and Robert F. Sutphin replace Yonce and Quinn as sergeants.

In his new rank as second in command to Murphy, Chief Davis will receive $6894 annually. He has held his present rank since January 1, 1945, and has completed 36 years with the department.

Captain Grunwell has been with the department since 1925 and is widely known as author of a recognized pump manual. Grunwell will receive $6242 in his new post.

A fireman for 28 years, Captain Kite has received several commendations and was instrumental in reorganization of the department's rescue squads. He also will move up to a $6242 annual salary.

'Baby' King Cobra, 7 Feet in Length, Arrives at Zoo

The first king cobra that the Washington Zoo has had in more than five years arrived by express yesterday afternoon.

Dr. W. M. Mann, director of the Zoo, said he traded "some American birds" to the zoo in Rotterdam, Holland, during a recent trip abroad, for his newest reptile.

The king cobra, one of the few poisonous snakes that attack man, becomes the largest of poisonous snakes when full grown, stretching some 18 feet in length.

The only one known to be in Washington, however, is "just a baby," Mann said. "Only 7 feet long."

2 Executions Slated Friday Are Postponed

Jesse James Patton, 23, and Reginald J. Wheeler, 28, will not be executed Friday as scheduled unless District Jail authorities are ordered to do so by the courts, it was learned yesterday.

Donald Clemmer, head of the Department of Corrections, said the electric chair at the jail was being readied in case a "go ahead" signal should be forthcoming.

Patton and Wheeler were convicted of the robbery-murder of Maurice L. Bernstein, 52, a druggist, on June 5, 1946. They were sentenced to die Friday and all efforts at delay seemed exhausted.

However, Wheeler's lawyer, James J. Laughlin, took action for a writ of habeas corpus Monday on grounds that under the law, the Chief Justice of the United States Court of Appeals must preside in all cases. This was not done in the Patton-Wheeler case, the petition related.

District Court Justice Edward A. Tamm denied the habeas corpus writ, but did grant an order which forbids the authorities from "changing the custody" of Wheeler pending this appeal. This, it was said, forces a postponement of execution unless the appeal is disposed of before Friday.

Wesley S. Williams, Patton's lawyer, delivered a similar petition and order to District Court yesterday. But, Justice Tamm was not in court and action was delayed until this morning.

Assistant United States Attorney John D. Lane, who is handling the case for the Government, said his office is studying the case to determine whether an immediate appeal should be sought.

Zone Rural Montgomery, Board Urged

McNays Would Extend Building Inspection Also to Entire County

Extension of zoning and building inspection to all of Montgomery County, Md., was suggested yesterday at a meeting of the county commissioners and officials of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission at Rockville.

The extension was suggested by County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr, who pointed out that building now is pushing rapidly into the rural areas of the county unprotected by zoning laws and building inspection.

Col. E. Brooke Lee, vice chairman of the planning commission, General Counsel J. Bond Smith and Planning Commissioner Richard F. Green appeared cool to the proposal.

"If the people in the upper part of the county want zoning they should have it," Lee declared, but sidestepped McNayr's query as to whether his group would aid in promoting the idea.

McNayr pointed out that extension of River rd. to connect with Ice House rd. north of Travilah will aid in opening this "great estate area" to development and that there should be some protection against dumping commercial enterprises into this area.

McNayr suggested that a building inspection and electrical inspection service should be provided for the entire county. Lee said the present inspection system in the suburban areas appears adequate. He added that large buildings such as theaters, hotels and churches are inspected by highly technical engineers other than the regular county building inspectors, who would not be competent to pass upon the safety of these larger edifices.

The conference also discussed outdoor signs in the regional district. Smith said there had not been adequate enforcement during the war and these signs now constitute "a headache and a nuisance."

Harry M. Martin of Kensington appeared to oppose use of county school buses to haul parochial school children as a violation of the American principle of separation of church and State. He also objected to purchase of the Viers Mill Village School site at $20,000 as excessive, contending the land is worth but $5000. No action was taken by the board.

$572 in Missing Funds Returned By Tax Cashier

Named by Barrett

Storm Heads Records Unit For Police

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett yesterday announced his assignment of Inspector Walter Storm to head the police department's Central Communications and Records Bureau.

The responsibility, formerly under supervision of Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, executive officer of the department, is in addition to Inspector Storm's duties as director of the training divison of the department.

Major Barrett said he made the change to relieve Inspector Truscott of "the press of responsibilities" he is under as executive officer. The bureau, created last January 1 following disclosures by The Washington Post of wholesale "pocketing" of crime reports by police, was organized by Inspector Truscott after a personal survey tour of modern crime reporting methods in eight major cities.

Capt. John Agnew, acting head of the CCRB, will continue in similar capacity under Inspector Storm, Major Barrett said.

Deputy Collector Says Man Admits He Took Money, Short Accounts

A District government cashier yesterday gave back $572 in District funds he admitted taking while working in the tax collector's Municipal Center branch.

Deputy Tax Collector George H. Kidwell, to whom the money was restored, said the employe had told him his accounts were short and that he had taken the money.

Kidwell said the District employe, whom officials so far have declined to name, came to his home yesterday at 7 a. m. and offered to return the money, discovered missing from the employe's cash box Monday.

"He tried to give me the money," Kidwell said. "But I told him that was neither the time nor the place to discuss the matter. I did take his keys, however."

Later, the employe came to the District Building where he conferred with Kidwell and Attorney Ralph Quinter of the corporation counsel's office.

Commissioner Guy Mason later said that detailed reasons for dismissing the man are being prepared and will be submitted to the employe, a veteran, in accordance with preferential hiring provisions of the GI Bill of Rights. At the time the charges are sent to the employe, Mason said his name will be made public.

Mason said the Commissioners also are forwarding, without comment, a copy of these charges to the United States district attorney, for whatever action that office may deem necessary.

The employe was described by Kidwell as a 38-year-old married man, a veteran of World War II. He has been employed by the District for about three years.

The District government did not stand to lose any funds when the shortage was discovered. The cashier was bonded for $10,000 and the bonding company was notified of the shortage.

He had reported for work on Monday, but left the office when he saw a representative of the District auditor's office in the collector's branch office at Municipal Center.

Alexandria Council Hears Sewage Case

Alexandria City Council, in special session last night, failed to fix responsibility for alleged long-standing drainage of raw sewage into a housing development playground.

Mayor William T. Wilkins announced after the meeting that "the question will not be dropped" and promised action until "this whole matter is straightened out."

Playground involved is one at Cameron Valley, former Government housing development for personnel of Fort Belvoir. The development, at the western edge of Alexandria, is administered by the Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority.

Called to explain delay in action of complaints from residents, Dr. W. Lewis Schafer, city health officer, said he was first told of the condition last Wednesday by a newspaper reporter after it had been brought to attention of the city council the previous night.

Keith Wade, city sanitation officer who also appeared before the council, said he first received complaints of the raw sewage outpourings in March, 1946. He said he investigated the matter and later helped the tenant of the property to find a plumber to make the required connection.

Found No Sewage

Wade told the council members he had assumed the connection had been made and had not been back to check the condition personally since. He added that an employe of the department had inspected the playground about a month later and reported he found no evidence of sewage there.

Mayor Wilkins then asked Wade if it was not his duty to see that the connection had been made. Wade responded that he "had never been specifically assigned the duty" of checking the matter.

Nicholas A. Colasanto, city manager, reported at the meeting that when he saw the property owner at 5 p. m. yesterday he "was surprised" the sewer connection had not been made.

A representative of the Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority told councilmen that the conditions had been reported to the Alexandria Health Department in March, 1946; March, 1947, and September, 1947, and that a report was made to Clark Slaymaker, sanitary inspector, about three weeks ago, for the fourth time.

Dr. Schafer, in explanation of his authority, said he felt his only recourse in such matters was to verify the complaints and refer them to the city attorney's office, provided the property owner failed to take corrective action.

Actor Fined $83 On 6 Traffic Counts

A former Marine who says he is now a movie actor was fined $83 here yesterday for six traffic charges which resulted from a chase by police in downtown Washington.

The defendant was listed as James R. Lester, 26, of 1836 Ontario pl. nw. and Hollywood, Calif.

Police said Lester was chased from 4th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. to Maryland ave. and 2d st. sw. Motorcycle Pvt. R. W. Holder began the chase and was joined by a detective cruiser. Speeds reached 42 miles an hour, police said.

In Municipal Court, the charges on which Lester was convicted were: No permit, unreasonable speed, passing a red light, passing on the right of another car, passing a stop sign and failing to exhibit registration card.

Lester was also charged with assaulting a sailor, Andrew C. Powers, 19, of the Arlington Navy Annex, in a cell at the Fifth Precinct station house. According to police, Lester began to choke Powers, who was being held on disorderly conduct charges, for no apparent reason. Three officers separated the two men.

Lester pleaded innocent to the charges and was ordered to stand trial October 13.

Hale claimed he took the money from his mother's purse because she owed it to him as a debt.

Ringworm Clinic Open

A scalp ringworm clinic was opened at the Municipal Center this week, Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, director of the Bureau of School Medical Inspection, announced yesterday.

Dr. Murphy urged parents to bring their children to the clinic. He pointed out early diagnosis means earlier treatment and possible cure. The clinic, in Room 6029 at the center, is open daily from 8:30 o'clock to 11:30.

'Fisherman' Fined

A dry-land fisherman caught an unexpected $100 fine yesterday in Municipal Court.

Francis E. Carroll, 60, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was found guilty of petty larceny. Police said he equipped himself with a pole tipped with a wire hook and used it to "fish" a pair of pants and shoes from an automobile parked at 12th and Independence ave. Monday afternoon.

The fine was imposed by Judge Armond Scott.

Accident Snarls Traffic

Midmorning traffic in the Wisconsin and Massachusetts ave. area was snarled for a half-hour yesterdya. At 10:50 a. m., cargo carried by a Navy trailer truck struck a high-tension wire and pulled over a steel pole. The streetcars stopped and automobiles were unable to pass. There were no injuries.

Jury to Call On State Police to Clean Up Vice

La Plata, Md., Aug. 17 (AP).—The Charles County grand jury will ask the State police to help local authorities "clean up the gambling and liquor situation in this county."

However, the jurors feel that one way to deal with illegal gambling in the county is to legalize slot machines, bingo and raffles—as has been done in three other southern Maryland counties, St. Marys, Calvert and Anne Arundel.

Repeal of the Bouse Act prohibiting use of evidence in misdemeanor cases that is obtained in an illegal manner also will help, a grand jury report signed by Foreman Foster M. Reeder stated.

The jury was recalled yesterday for a special one-day investigation.

The report said that "the State police should be asked to lend whatever assistance to the sheriff's office as is needed to clean up the gambling situation in Charles County, which most everyone seems to know is getting progressively worse but about which the grand jury has been able to secure no witnesses."

It added that the jury is writing Col. Beverly Ober, State police superintendent, "asking that the support of his department be given the sheriff's office."

The session was held in an effort to get county residents to come forward with whatever evidence they might have of gambling or liquor law violations. None appeared.

The report recommends that the Charles delegation to the General Assembly draw up a bill for a county referendum on legalizing slot machines and that "steps be taken" to legalize:

"The operation of money wheels, bingo, etc., and chances used by churches or civic organizations at their various affairs to raise money for community and civic work."

The jury asked the legislative delegation to "work for repeal of the Bouse Act which would allow the sheriff and deputies to search alleged violators without a warrant."

Moderation Gets Credit For Hippo's Longevity

New York, (U.P.)—Pete, a hippopotamus at the Bronx Zoo, at 45 is believed to be the second oldest hippo on record. One zoo official attributes his longevity to moderation.

"He moves about sedately and doesn't gallivant like the hippos still in their teens. And at no time in his life has Peter ever eaten like a pig," the official said.

Zoo officials believe that a hippo in a zoo in Amsterdam, The Netherlands, lived to be 46 years old.

Woman Reaches 100 Today, Dislikes Gossip, Show-Offs

The Washington Post

MRS. MARTHA INGHAM
For her today—100 red roses

Mrs. Martha Ingham, who is just exactly 100 years old today, has met a couple of United States Presidents in her day, but asked a reporter not to mention their names because "I don't like show-offs."

The modest white-haired woman whose hearing, eyesight and friendly smile are still in fine condition doesn't want her address in the papers either.

"If they knew my address they'd come just for curiosity because I'm 100," she says.

"I don't like gossip and I don't like people who ask questions that aren't their business. I tell 'em to come back in the next century," she chuckles.

Mrs. Ingham is a cousin of the late Senator Jacob H. Gallinger of New Hampshire, once chairman of the Senate District Committee, for whom Gallinger Hospital was named. It was through him that she met the two past Presidents, and many other notables.

One of these, former Senator Gerald P. Nye, is sending her a birthday cake today. Another gift of 100 red roses will come from a fellow boarder in the rooming house on G st. nw., who says Mrs. Ingham "has been like a mother to me."

Mrs. Ingham is pretty well confined these days to her home which she shares with her daughter, Miss Ethel Ingham, and Whitey, a thoroughbred Spitz dog.

But as far as recreation goes, says Mrs. Ingham, "I like company."

Mrs. Ingham, born near Ottawa, Canada, moved to Cambridge, Mass., after her marriage in 1870 to William J. F. Ingham. Her husband, who owned a clothing store there, died in 1893.

Mrs. Ingham moved to the District in 1900 with her daughter Ethel, and lived for many years at 1625 16th st. nw. Another daughter, Mrs. Edith Smith, lives in Hughesville, Md. She lost a son about 11 years ago and a third daughter back in 1896.

Montgomery Would Amend New Charter

Deletion of a paragraph of the proposed charter for Montgomery County, Md., will be sought by the Montgomery County Commissioners and other governmental agencies to "make it a workable instrument."

The law firm of Niles, Barton, Morrow and Yost, Baltimore, bond attorneys for the commissioners, was retained yesterday by the commissioners and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, to seek the deletion of the objectionable paragraph dealing with power of referendum by 10 per cent of the voters.

Law Firm Objects

H. Warren Buckler, jr., of the law firm, had informed the commissioners, the planning commission and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, that the firm would be unable to approve any further bond issues should the charter be approved by the voters in its present form.

The Montgomery County Circuit Court already has ordered deletion of the section of the charter providing for promulgation of the annual county levy in June, since this is a legislative act which must be consummated in the month of May, set aside as a legislative month.

The paragraph which the officials seek to delete permits a referendum to be called by any 10 per cent of the voters and, they contend, would make possible delay of any annual levy for months while a referendum was being held. This, in turn, would make the county unable to guarantee payment of principal and interest on county bonds provided for in the levy.

Paralysis Feared

Application of the referendum to a tax levy could paralyze the governmental functions of the county, County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr declared in announcing the decision to retain the law firm.

Hubert A. Schneider, who filed the petition which resulted in the action of the Circuit Court, has appealed the decision of the court allowing the remainder of the charter to be submitted to the voters in November.

The county commissioners and the planning commission are not passing upon the merits of charter as such, McNayr explained. "They merely are interested in having a workable instrument presented to the voters in November," he said.

Arundel Plans Crackdown on 'Crazy Drivers'

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 17 (AP).—A crackdown on "crazy drivers" will be launched by Anne Arundel County, State's Attorney James C. Morton, jr., said today.

Because of an "appalling" death rate, he said, he will seek maximum sentences of three years in jail and a $1000 fine for any drivers convicted of manslaughter by automobile.

He called a meeting, probably this week, of county trial magistrates, County Police Chief John H. Souers and Annapolis Chief William Curry to map a campaign against traffic violations.

"The police are going to enforce strictly all traffic rules and regulations, because deaths result largely from infractions of these regulations," he said.

Morton made his statement to reporters at a scheduled hearing before Trial Magistrate Samuel J. Macaluso for a motorist charged with manslaughter by auto in the death of a passenger. The hearing was postponed because of the absence of a State's witness.

Morton said he would seek the maximum sentence for all pending highway manslaughter cases.

He referred to "a series of cases involving death by auto which have occurred in the past ten days."

"Crazy drivers who just will not abide by the law" are responsible for most traffic fatalities, Morton said. "They are a menace to life and limb."

Orndorff Death Verdict Given

A certificate of death due to natural causes was issued yesterday in the death July 20 of Mrs. Allie Orndorff, 36, of 226 Jefferson st. nw.

Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner, issued the certificate, upon receiving results of a chemical analysis. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

A sister, Mrs. Betty Day, found Mrs. Orndorff ill in bed on July 20. She was pronounced dead after efforts of fire rescue squad members failed to revive her. The woman's husband was reported to be with the American Red Cross in Germany.

Quade said the prisoner apparently made a rope from a blanket, tied it around his neck and jumped from the top of a double-deck bunk. The sheriff said the prisoner left a note asking to be buried in Arlington, Va.

Stationhouse Bolt Just a Dash From His Blue Heaven

Baltimore, Aug 17 (AP).—Neighbors watched last night as a man dashed out the rear door of a police station, jumped a 4-foot fence, galloped across a lot, cleared another 4-foot barrier, and disappeared.

They waited for pursuing officers to come shooting. But nothing happened. Police explained the man was a fugitive from his wife—not from them.

They said a woman had been around to the station earlier in the evening to find her husband, who she feared was out drinking.

They found him, and brought him back for a reconciliation. But at the sight of his spouse he made for the exit.

At last report police were not looking for him. But his wife was.

Youthful Dabbler In Art Is Given Term as Robber

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP).—A 17-year-old Pennsylvania youth who dabbles in art, likes to read Shakespeare, and prefers Chopin to boogie-woogie, was sentenced today to 10 years' imprisonment on armed robbery charges.

The youth, Glenn H. Fessler of East Earl, Pa., admitted he twice held up a Baltimore shoe store last month, for a total of $76.

Dr. Manfred S. Guttmacher, psychiatrist, told Judge Michael S. Manley Fessler is "an example of the kind of complicated behavior in which the individual commits crime to satisfy a subconscious urge to be punished."

William J. O'Donnell, assistant State's attoney, said Fessler was twice arrested in Texas for breaking into homes and was last arrested in Culpeper, Va., for stealing milk.

Firm, 2 Officers Indicted on GI Housing Charges

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP).—A building corporation and two of its officers were indicted today by a Federal grand jury on charges of defrauding war veterans in the sales of homes.

The indictments were the first results of a Federal investigation of GI housing started in Baltimore last winter. The Baltimore grand jury, in a parallel inquiry, previously had indicted eight companies, 27 officials and 5 municipal employes.

Named in today's indictments were Chinquapin, Inc., and Theodore Julio, president, and Frank Julio, vice president. The firm had been fined $800 June 14, on charges of violating the city building code as an aftermath of the Baltimore grand jury indictments.

The Federal charges allege the sales of houses in excess of ceiling prices, construction not up to specifications, and false statements to the office of temporary control in reporting the sales.

Court Schedules Drunk-Test Case

Richmond, Va., Aug. 17 (AP).—Seven criminal cases, including one based on the right of a motorist to demand a doctor's examination if he is arrested for drunk driving, will be heard by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals during its session in Staunton, a court docket disclosed today.

The high court will end its 1947-48 term with a three-day session opening at the Masonic Building in Staunton at 9:30 a. m. September 6.

Opinions probably will be handed down September 8, observers said. A decision is expected at that time in the mandamus proceedings brought by Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., to determine the constitutionality of State laws permitting assets to the State retirement system to be loaned to Virginia localities for school construction.

Mrs. John Nance Garner Dies at 78 in Texas Home

MRS. JOHN N. GARNER
Dies in Uvalde

Uvalde, Tex., Aug. 17 (AP).—Mrs. John Nance Garner, 78, wife of the thirty-second Vice President of the United States, died in her tree-shaded brick home today.

Dr. George B. Cunningham, her physician, said she died of Parkinson's disease. She had suffered from it for the last six years. The disease caused her limbs to tremble. In the later stages, she was unable to walk.

Nevertheless, the gray-haired, frail old lady remained a familiar sight in the business district here—driven through the streets of Uvalde by a Negro woman chauffeur.

Only during the last few days, when the disease had become acute, was she unable to leave the house.

As Garner's personal secretary throughout his public life, she was known as an efficient business woman.

In 1937, she and Garner were presented honorary doctor of laws degrees by Baylor University at Waco. Pat Neff, then president of the university, commended Mrs. Garner, as well as her husband, for high public service.

Garner frequently referred to her as "my right hand."

For more than a half century, the life of John Garner was the life of Ettie Garner.

From the time the sandy-haired young Uvalde lawyer married Ettie Rheiner at Sabinal, Texas, November 25, 1895, the two were inseparable companions.

Became His Secretary

She went with him to Austin in 1898 when he started his long climb in public service as a member of the Texas Legislature.

She became his personal secretary as he went on to Congress, up to the Speakership of the House and finally to the Vice Presidency.

In later years in Washington, others performed routine secretarial duties, but Mrs. Garner continued to supervise the work. For many years she kept a gas stove and a coffee pot in a corner of her husband's office. Often the couple would lock the office doors and eat their lunches there.

The two retired in 1941 to the buff brick home Garner built "for Ettie" in Uvalde in 1920 after Garner had sworn in Henry Wallace as his successor as Vice President.

Husband at Bedside

At the bedside were her husband, the former Vice President; her son, Tully; two nurses and a Negro maid. A doctor arrived a few minutes after her death at about 4:30 p. m. (CST).

Mrs. Garner had been in a coma since early yesterday.

Funeral services will be held at 4 p. m. (CST) Wednesday in the Garner home. Burial will be here. All business houses will be closed during the afternoon.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ruby A. Beard and three daughters; Miss E. Grace Beard who lives with her mother at Capitol View ave., Miss Edythe Beard of College Park, Md., and Mrs. Mabel Steurmann, Sandy Spring, Md.

Funeral services will be held on Thursday at 9 a. m. at the Warner Pumphrey funeral home in Silver Spring. Burial will be in the Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Winchester Gas Service Cut-Off Slated August 31

Richmond, Va., Aug. 17 (AP).—Effective midnight August 31, Winchester gas consumers will have to seek other means to heat homes and cook meals.

Today the State Corporation Commission approved an order authorizing the Consumers Utilities Co. of Harrisonburg to cease distributing gas to approximately 900 consumers in the city of Winchester and the Federick County area.

The order stemmed from an explosion June 23, which killed one person and injured 17 others. Escaping gas was blamed.

The Winchester city council demanded that the company make city-wide improvements. The gas company said it was unable financially to carry out the program. The council later approved an order canceling the company's franchise.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

New Envoy to Canada

Steinhardt's Career Packed With Adventurous Action In Eastern 'Hot Spots'

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

UNITED STATES Ambassador to Canada Ray Atherton has reached retirement age and around October 1 our most seasoned non-career diplomat, Laurence Steinhardt, will take over. Mr. Steinhardt, at present Ambassador to Czechoslovakia, has been toiling at his self-chosen trade for the past 16 years. During this span he has held down six chief of mission posts—Sweden, Peru, Russia, Turkey, Czechoslovakia—a record hitherto unequalled by any career or non-career official. Though usually housed most elegantly, surrounded by usual diplomatic frills, the Steinhardt career hasn't been all striped pants and cookie pushing.

He's bobbed up serenely over three assassination attempts—once in Peru where a local political party, the 'Apristas, believed bumping off the Ambassador would bring in the United States Navy and rid them of their pet hate, Peru's President; a second time, just after the war, motoring from Pilsen to Carlsbad when a few remaining Sudeten Germans chopped down a tree which missed squashing his car by seconds; and a third time at a friend's house in Prague when he was pot-shotted through a window.

Other high lights include living in Moscow under a German bombardment, evacuating with the embassy to Kuibyshev, the temporary Soviet capital, and eating twice on a five-day train trip; flying from the temporary capital to Teheran en route to Washington with the Max Litvinoffs, Quentin Reynolds, Sir Walter Monckton, and being lost five days in blizzards, grounded because the Russian plane's sparkplugs conked out. Ten days before Pearl Harbor, flying back from Russia in a plane carrying explosives for MacArthur, one of the craft's engines blew out, 2000 gallons of gas had to be dumped; from Istanbul to Cairo his plane was chased by Germans, from Cairo to Ankara the ambassadorial plane caught fire. On flights from Kuibyshev the temperature staggered from 35 below zero to 125 above.

And so it went—apparently never a dull moment! Most notable and least publicized exploit was Steinhardt finagling some 400 United States pilots and crew out of neutral Turkey. The aviators were forced down for various reasons returning from Balkan missions. Instead of twiddling their thumbs through ensuing war days they were sneaked out singly and in pairs. For this cloak-and-daggering Steinhardt received the Legion of Merit, which was requested by the Air Force, not the State Department.

Mrs. Steinhardt and their 21-year-old daughter, Dulcie Ann, haven't been back to this country in nine years. Mrs. S., besides being a bridge expert, speaks nine languages fluently, Dulcie Ann trails with six. The three Steinhardts have met, entertained practically every world figure during the past 16 years—their impact on Canada should be fascinating.

Any Extra Golf Clubs

NOW that summer's nearly over, how's your golf club situation? Has your husband a few odd sticks he doesn't fancy enough to store wintertime? Do you know anyone too busy, perhaps too lethargic, to continue swatting a ball? Wouldn't it be a sensible idea to get rid of those bulky golf bags stuffing the hall closet?

The reason for all this is that over in Holland, most golfing equipment either was destroyed or disappeared during the German occupation and today golf clubs are unobtainable. There is no extra gas for motoring, summer sports are pretty much restricted by distance and the Kennemere Club near Haarlem (via New York's Mrs. Edgar Leonard, who has a country place nearby), is making an appeal.

Any golf clubs or other equipment will be gratefully received at either the Netherlands Chancery at 1470 Euclid st. nw. or at the Netherlands Embassy at 2347 S st. nw. At both places Mme. van Kleffens, wife of the Dutch Ambassador, will have them packed and shipped.

British Teachers To Be Feted at Tea

Exchange teachers from Great Britain will be entertained at tea at the British Embassy on Tuesday, August 24. The Minister, F. R. Hoyer Millar, will act as host in the absence of the Ambassador, Sir Oliver Shewell Franks.

British teachers, numbering about 120, will arrive in New York tomorrow and Saturday in two groups, and they will come directly to Washington. In accordance with the exchange plan of the English Speaking Union, the same number of American teachers will go to Great Britain to teach in schools there for a period of one year.

By Peggy Preston

DON'T DESPAIR completely about your old suit with the too short skirt. There is just a chance that it will be in vogue next year.

This is the heartening word from young Betty Brown, one of the fashion editors of Harper's Junior Bazaar, who was in town yesterday for the College Fashion Show presented by The Hecht Co. in the Presidential Room at the Statler Hotel. "We think the trend in college circles, at least, will be toward a shorter hemline," Miss Brown confided, and added quickly, "No drastic change, you understand, but a return to the ideal midcalf length. Trailing skirts have proved too cumbersome for young, active American girls."

MISS PRESTON

This winter, according to Miss Brown, the college girl will be trimmer and neater looking than in the past. She describes it as the "pared down look." Shoulders and waistline are form fitting and slim. Bulk will be popular only in the great coats which can be belted with a variety of belts, either in leather or fabric.

Date dresses will be different in that they need not be in traditional black. Gray, winter navy blue, brown and green are exceptionally good for dress-up frocks this fall and winter.

Harper's Junior Bazaar also recommends tone on tone effects, such as light gray on dark gray for wool suits and coats; waistcoats in chamois, corduroy and tweed; little shapes of felt for hats; and sturdy brogues, designed for solid comfort with a wide strap over the instep.

In the jewelry department, the newest items are little pins, worn in groups of threes either at the collar, lapel or belt.

Yesterday's show featured many of the fashion items recommended by Harper's Bazaar in its college issue, when every effort was made to assemble young clothes for a young budget. The $200 wardrobe pictured in the magazine was brought to life on the runway. It includes a handsome brown wool coat; taffeta date dress in navy blue; a glen plaid skirt, a two-piece woolen dress with a decorative scalloped collar, and a worsted suit of navy and pink check.

THE COLLEGE lass had yet another champion in town yesterday. She was Miss Betty Coffin, assistant merchandise editor of Vogue, here for a private showing of Back to School clothes at Julius Garfinckel & Co.

Miss Coffin's fashion picture for the campus is a tweedy one. Your prettiest dress will be of tweed and your most feminine suit will be of the same fabric with velveteen collar and cuffs, according to Vogue's representative.

"The old idea that tweeds are meant for country wear and should be man-tailored vanished when manufacturers discovered a way to make sheer, pliable tweed," she pointed out.

Other Vogue-sponsored style items include little jersey blouses and skirts, giving the appearance of an all-in one costume; stiff brocaded fabrics for date and evening wear, the jackets tiny and unadorned, the skirts wide and full.

Miss Coffin will be back in Washington September 11 for the fall fashion revue which Garfinckel's will present at the Statler Hotel.

AN ulster in jade worumbo alpaca is an important item in the Vera Maxwell collection. It features a removable belt, casually knotted in back. Small brass buttons with a lion insigna decorate the front. The convertible collar can be worn flat or rolled, or may be buttoned high under the chin

Mrs. Gordon Fetes Mrs. Rowland

Mrs. English Gordon entertained at dinner last evening at the United Nations Club in honor of Mrs. Frances Rowland of Philadelphia. Mrs. Rowland is the house guest of Miss Carolyn Nash, with whom she recently visited in Hot Springs, Va.

At the dinner last night were Vice Admiral and Mrs. Robert Griffin who have just returned from Japan, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Edward C. Ewen.

Off to Chicago

Mrs. Marjory Hendricks of Normandy Farms, near Potomac, Md., is leaving today for Chicago where she will spend several days and will then go to Madison, Wis., to visit her son, Roger Todd, at the University of Wisconsin.

Novel Fabrics for Fall

DONNEGAL tweeds and worumbo alpaca take the lead in designer Vera Maxwell's new fall collection. She employs a tissue tweed suiting which she predicts will take the place of gabardine with many fashion-minded women. Miss Maxwell went to the British Isles to obtain the novel fabrics for her new line of clothes which she showed in Washington at Julius Garfinckel & Co.

Harris & Ewing

THE "Life Size Suit" is done by Miss Maxwell in fine tissue tweed with a lined jacket. Designed for the smaller woman, it has a blouse of striped jersey with adjustable neckline. Cuffs of the blouse fabric give a note of bright color to the jacket

Unmarried Woman Has Had Occasional Dinner Dates With Married Man for a Year; Now She Wonders If His Wife Is Possessive as He Says

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am unmarried and for the past year I have been having an occasional dinner date with a married man. He is an engineer and our work is in allied fields.

His wife has a job which entails considerable traveling and these dinner dates take place only when she is out of town.

One afternoon I was stymied by a technical problem and knowing that Bruce was at home, I called him for advice. I was startled to hear him say, "You must have the wrong number."

He gave me this brushoff reply because his wife was home, he told me later, and when I explained that I wanted to discuss a business matter, he said it made no difference, that she would nave been standing at his elbow, asking who was on the wire.

Is He Boasting Of Wife's Love?

ALSO he told me that once when the telephone rang at 2 o'clock in the morning and someone asked for him by his first name, his wife didn't speak to him for two weeks afterward.

I am wondering whether a wife can be so possessive, or whether he has an inferiority complex and is using this means of persuading me that his wife is intensely concerned about him.

Our association has been merely friendly; nothing more than an occasional dinner together at some nice place during her absence, and I don't feel that I am taking anything away from her. I wouldn't wish to be married to him and I think he feels the same about me; but you may think the dating arrangement is unethical, even so. Please advise me. D. C.

Girl's Attitude Isn't Sincere

DEAR D. C.: To say that you wouldn't wish to be married to Bruce, who is already married and patently has no desire to wed you, is to let slip the fact that you have been visualizing such a relationship with him, which means that your professions of disinterested friendship are insincere.

This logical deduction leads to another inference equally valid, I think: namely, that Bruce's brushoff reply when you called him at home, also his warning emphasis on his wife's alleged vehement jealousy, probably is his canny defense against your heart-starved attempts to promote a significantly cozy alliance with him.

It appears that Bruce dabbles cautiously in playboyism when his wife is out of town, but takes this divertissement even less seriously than he does his marriage vows; and inasmuch as he dines you only occasionally, it is a pretty safe bet that he has other girl friends on the string, too—as the discomfiting 2 a. m. telephone call would indicate.

Man's Behavior Is Disreputable

THUS as I see the picture, Bruce has a perpetually uneasy conscience in relation to his wife, whose allegiance he values. Although he plays the field when her back is turned, he doesn't want to lose her; hence lives in fear that proof of his trifling may come to her attention and prompt her to divorce him, in revenge for the long-time vague anxiety he has caused her.

Her distress can hardly be termed possessive when his behavior which evokes it is sneaky and two-faced: cheating and deceiving her on the score of honest dealing, affording her warrant to feel disturbed and distrustful.

The fact of his dining with you occasionally couldn't be construed as disreputable per se; but when he does it furtively, the arrangement dishonors both of you. And while you may be taking nothing of value from his wife, you are certainly throwing your good name away in having hush-hush dates with him. M. H.

Given in marriage by her father, Mrs. Shields wore white satin made with a sweetheart neckline and a long train. Her veil was attached to a pearl trimmed coronet and she carried a nosegay bouquet of roses and white gladiolus tips.

Mrs. Frank L. Dettor, jr., of Baltimore, was matron of honor for her sister. Robert Shields of Baltimore was best man for his brother and the bride's brothers, John Prender, jr., and Robert Prender, were ushers.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Grigsby. The couple left afterward for a Southern motor trip. They will reside in Baltimore.

Miss Sarah Murphy was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Peggy Panagos, Mrs. Ruth Wallace, Miss Ethel May O'Brien and Miss Dourice Brenton. Miss Carol Jeanne Jaeger, niece of the bride, was flower girl. Jack Smith served as best man and the ushers were Arthur Brew, Samuel Dellinger, John Foster and Philip Gentilcore.

About Homecoming Classes

Will you print a list of places where a gal can learn to cook, sew, etc., if she cannot learn at home? G. M. K.

The city school system plans to start evening classes in cooking and sewing and a daytime class in sewing for adults early in September. For further information, call National 6000, extension 614.

The Young Women's Christian Association also conducts both cooking and dress-making classes. Further information about them can be obtained by phoning Metropolitan 2100, extension 28. The Y also has classes in dress design, millinery, home management, interior decorating, modern marriage, and a "handy-woman" course.

A large sewing machine company conducts dress-making classes at several of its stores here. There will be evening as well as daytime classes, starting in September. Call Oliver 7015 for further information.

What is the address of the Forbes Silver Co.? I believe that it is an old firm. If it is now out of business, who do you suggest writing to find out just how old my silver set is? It was passed down to me from my great-grandmother and it would be most interesting to trace it further back, if possible. It is quadruple silver plate with an eagle's head hallmark and is very ornate. E. A.

One local jeweler is under the impression that the Forbes Silver Co. was taken over by the International Silver Co. It might be worthwhile writing this firm at Meriden, Conn. If you take a piece of your silver to a reliable antique shop, you may find someone who can tell you its approximate age.

In answer to a request in this paper last week, I would like to let L. L. know that I make corsages of artificial flowers. My telephone number is WIsconsin 8939. E. L. B.

To T. J. M. and N. S.: Here is the recipe for Tarred Angel Pie:

- ¾ pound marshmallows
- 1/3 cup orange juice
- 1½ cup heavy cream, whipped
- 1 graham cracker crust, baked
- ¾ cup semisweet cholocate, melted
- 1 cup grated coconut

Combine marshmallows and orange juice in top of double boiler. Heat over hot water until marshmallows are melted. Cool. Fold in cream. Pour into chilled pie shell. Chill immediately. When completely chilled, cover with chocolate. (If chocolate does not melt easily, add a few drops of hot water.) Top with coconut. This recipe makes one 9-inch pie.

Will you tell me what to use to remove some oil and grease spots from the outside of my automobile without also removing the paint? A. G.

Most fender and body repair places sell a rubbing compound which can be used in removing stubborn grease spots that will not wash off.

Is it necessary for me to send engraved invitations to my wedding to the people with whom I work every day? I plan to invite them orally, and it seems foolish to spend so much money for invitations if it is not necessary to send engraved invitations to close associates. R. L. R.

If you plan to invite the entire office, you might send an engraved invitation to the group to be placed on the bulletin board or passed around for everyone to see. If you only plan to invite certain close friends in the office, whether you send engraved invitations depends a good deal on the personalities involved.

Actually, the most flattering wedding invitation is a verbal urging or personal note to the effect that you especially want that person to attend your wedding. However, some touchy people might feel a little slighted at not receiving engraved invitations such as were sent other guests.

Can you tell me where we could find a drop table that is attached to a kitchen wall? I understand it's the type used in trailers. Have tried several department stores with no luck. F. B. L.

A table of this kind can be obtained through a Connecticut ave. shop. Its telephone number is Executive 5572. The wooden drop tables are $20 to $30.

GOOD AND FANCY—as a party dessert should be—is this baked Alaska Supreme. It comes from the oven all brown and beautiful and gives your guests a delightful, cooling surprise

BAKED ALASKA SUPREME

- 1½ tablespoon butter or margarine
- ¼ cup brown sugar
- 1½ tablespoons flour
- 1 tablespoon water
- 2 cups corn flakes
- 4 egg whites
- 2/3 cup granulated sugar
- 1 brick ice cream (1 quart)

Melt butter. Stir in combined brown sugar and flour. Add water and cook over low heat, stirring until a bit of the mixture dropped from a soft ball in cold water. Pour hot syrup mixture over corn flakes, stirring so that each flake is coated. Spread on wooden board shaping into a rectangle a little larger than brick of ice cream. Let cool. Beat egg whites until foamy, gradually add sugar, and continue beating until stiff. Place brick of ice cream on corn flakes mixture. Cover completely with meringue. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) until meringue is lightly browned. Serve immediately. Bring to the table on cake plate or platter. Serve with spoon onto individual serving plates. This recipe serves eight persons.

On the Town

BECAUSE of a series of mishaps and a full schedule last week we were unable to catch the opening show at the Shoreham terrace, a misfortune that we regretted earlier this week when we finally did get around to it. But then it's still not too late to go into a stream of superlatives and shout the praises of one of the best tap acts to hit this town in quite some time. The act is Johnny Mack, who serves as ice-breaker, crowd warmer-upper or whatever, for the rest of the show. If he's not headliner material then we have one used but serviceable typewriter we're willing to disguise as an entree for dinner on any given date.

Bella Smara

Johnny has a fresh and different style from the moment he makes his entrance. He gains the center of the floor with confidence and personality. Comes a short routine with a minimum of taps while he walks around the floor saying hello to the folks and drums on their tables and glasses with a pair of drumsticks. After this is out of the way and he has the audience's attention, which he really has, he goes into his real dance routine. His "below the ankle taps," a bit of knowledge offered by a party at our table who knows tap dancing, is very clean and the best sort of dancing to watch.

Johnny has worked for Vaughn Monroe, and has done an engagement in the Taj Mahal, of all places. Since he's still a young man he'll bear watching in this crazy thing called show business.

P. S.—Barnee and the boys in the band are doing a fine job backing Johnny, all of which goes to show you that one showman will recognize another and do his best to support him.

Galante and Leonardo fill the other half of the bill with a bit of ballroom dancing that the audience goes for. They know what to do to the ordinary routines to make them go over with the audience.

SHE ees kees so many mens she ees sahmtimes get mebee a leetle cahnfuse weeth the whole theeng. No, we haven't blown our stack, nor has the printer blown his. It's just our way of saying there's a different act at the Casino Royal. Her name is Smaro Pascilidou, alias Bella Smaro, and legally Smaro Trimton. Bella, or Smaro, is reputed to have had a $250,000 hunk of cabbage at one time but was reported to have lost it during the late dispute.

But to get back to this kissing theeng. Bella has, during one engagement or another in her career of show biz, kissed the Duke of Windsor, former King Carol of Romania, King Farouk of Egypt and a few lesser ones. It's all part of her dancing act though, and love never broke the surface. Bella had the misfortune, in addition to losing that healthy cabbage patch, of being accused of conspiring with the enemy by both the Allies and the other boys. She says she was really helping the Greek underground and gave the enemy only Phony dope. That being neither here nor there, we'll say that she does a few exotic dances that have put her in some of the top clubs in the world. We are not zee keeng but we weel be seeting on zee reengside wahndering eef thees keesing theeng ees true.

There's been much pro and con as to whether the Cairo will or will not be reopening after a couple of losing years. And if it does would the redoubtable Sam Schanker be the opener. It is and he won't! An orchestra is being booked for an opening date sometime next month. The place will have a bad name to beat down, but the present owner has always had a name for fair dealing and once the crowd finds that out, the place should go. Brother Schanker, by the by, is looking around town for a small place to open for himself. What kind and how small we couldn't find out.

MARK TRAIL

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Our District Cab Drivers Are a Special Breed

Digging through a pile of mail that accumulated while I was away, I found a back issue of Yellowgram, the sprightly house organ of the Yellow Cab Co.

In it, Editor Floyd Montgomery directs a letter to me, asking for information about the quotation:

"Life is never so hurried that there is no time for courtesy."

(Floyd is a great hand at reminding his Yellow hackers to be careful and courteous.)

I was just about to put our library to work on the quotation when another letter arrived, this one from Elizabeth Hook of 200 Massachusetts ave. nw. Elizabeth wrote:

"I saw Floyd's open letter to you. The original quotation is:

"'Life is not so short but that there is always time enough for courtesy.'

"It's Ralph Waldo Emerson, but I don't know just when it was written. If Mr. Montgomery really wants to know, I'll dig out my Emerson scrapbook."

Regardless of when it was written, it's still a wonderful line. And Floyd's interest in it is typical of the difference between Washington's hackers and those in most other American cities.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Perhaps it's unfair of me to criticize you for an error when I have neglected to compliment you on the many occasions when I might have.

But, nevertheless, you have been in error. You wrote: "This is apparently meant to infer . . ." You should have written: "This is apparently meant to imply." YOU did the inferring; the statement implied.

Yours to the end of the (District) line. Fred Mintz,
8 Webb rd.,
Bethesda, Md.

Dear Fred:

Thanks for taking the time and trouble to pass along a friendly correction.

I know how you must feel when somebody comes up with one of your pet speech peeves for the umpteenth time. The one that strikes sparks with me is the use of "outside of" when "aside from" or "other than" is meant. It results in such silly sentences as:

"Nobody uses this razor outside of me." Bill.

BY THE WAY——

I'm not the guy who was accused of being a Commie; I have never worked for the Government; I don't have a wife named Sonia; if I had a dollar for every time I've been asked "are you the guy" I'd go on another vacation.

MEMO TO NEWSCASTERS

One of the Cosmos Club's better known members tells me he was listening to a news broadcast the other day, and heard the announcer refer to the Russian "counsulate." Not once, but time after time.

At the conclusion of the program, he called the station and asked for the newscaster by name.

"If you want to tell him the difference between consul and counsel," replied the operator wearily, "you'll have to wait your turn. There are other complaints ahead of you."

OR AT LEAST A FEW MORE FINGERS

Marie Phillips of 3984 Ames st. ne. suggests that the solution to my cigarette problem is to learn to roll my own.

I've tried it several times, Marie, and invariably find that I'd do right well at it if I only had one more arm.

TWIN BILL

B. P. Perry of 126 O st. sw. and David B. Harrison of 900 19th st. nw. call our attention to a double feature which played the Drive-In Theater recently:

"Nobody Lives Forever," "Exposed."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Well-trained, pretty young female cat; affectionate, and not too fussy about her food." (Emerson 7209).

FOR A CHANGE

When the sun donned a halo Monday, it was such a perfectly beautiful day that the weatherman should have been wearing one, too.

WITH RESERVATIONS

For whom will Washingtonians be rooting when World Series time rolls around again? That's easy.

When the Indians take to the warpath against the Braves, we'll be cheering for the Redskins.

THE STORM

Cloudlets
Gather in the sky.
A cosmic force is there;
Darkness thickens; a flash, roar, rain——
The storm.

Lewis Bryant Perkins.

Listen to Bill Gold each noon, Monday through Saturday, over WINX (1340) and WINX-FM (96.3).

NEW YORK.—In London this week the Gaekwar of Baroda, whose subjects requested that he abdicate because he went on sprees costing millions of dollars, denied the charges of misappropriating funds. The maharajah said that he was returning to Baroda to answer the accusations. . . . The ruler naturally will not be examined by the customs guard when he returns. It will be difficult for his state assembly to learn, therefore, whether during his stay in New York he spent one million dollars on jewelry—including a piece of the Vargas diamond and the largest slice of the Junkers diamond.

Lauchlin Currie, the former White House aide whose name was brought into the Red investigation by Elizabeth Bentley, is bringing a million-dollar libel suit. . . . Ten years ago Davey Chasen, the broadway comic, opened his Hollywood restaurant with financial backing from Harold Ross, the magazine editor. Chasen has prospered so well that he now owns an apartment house, and next month he'll buy out Ross' interest.

A New York book-publisher is planning some limited editions illustrated by the most eminent painters in the world. He asked Deems Taylor for advice. They discussed several of the painters and the books which would be assigned to them. One of the artists was Marie Laurencin, whose paintings rarely snow people's noses. . . . "Laurencin would be fine for your project," Taylor advised the publishers. "She probably would do a fine job on any book you'd give her to illustrate. But don't give her 'Cyrano de Bergerac.'"

Paul Porter, examining the revelations of Elizabeth Bentley, told the press corps: "Miss Bentley is the Red Amber." . . . The first flash sent by the United Press on the leap of Mrs. Stepanova Kosenkina from the third floor of the Soviet consulate contained an appropriate typo: "She was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, suffering from fractures and international injuries." . . . The Soviet consul, incidentally, is expected to be recalled soon for his bungling of the case. . . . The new Sartre play which will be produced in New York as "Red Gloves," was produced in Paris as "Dirty Hands," and in London as "Crime of Passion."

Tips For U. S. on Taming Soviet

By Drew Pearson

When a nation is in dire trouble with another nation—as we are today with Russia—wise leaders concentrate on the weakest point in the other nation's armor.

Pearson

The weakest point in Russia's armor is her own people—as this column has so long emphasized, and as is being emphasized today in New York by two Russian school teachers. In brief, when the Russian people get to know the difference between the United States and the USSR, they prefer the United States.

Simultaneously the Moscow press and radio are putting out completely false ideas about these Russian school teachers—because the Kremlin knows all too well that the Russian people are the weakest spot in the Soviet armor and that they must continue to be deceived.

The Kremlin knows this, but the State Department doesn't know it—or, at least, doesn't do anything about it. The diplomats who guide our Russian policy do not seem to realize that there will always be danger of war with Russia—and grave danger—until we get behind the iron curtain to make friends with the Russian people.

When this column suggested floating weather balloons into Russia from Germany with propaganda messages and gifts attached (which the Weather Bureau says is quite feasible), the Army and Air Force were most enthusiastic.

But the State Department, which has the final say in all such foreign-policy matters, said no. Russia, they decreed, might be offended.

War Prevention Code

Perhaps it is lese majesty for a newspaperman to give advice to the State Department. But since, if war comes, it is my children—not the diplomats—who will have to fight, I, therefore, exercise my right as one American citizen to make some suggestions to our diplomats:

1. Please remember that Russian bureaucrats are just the same whether under the Czar or the Kremlin—dictatorial, ruthless, unscrupulous. They will lie, cheat, browbeat. They understand only one thing—the diplomatic straight-arm and superior force.

2. Please remember also that the Russian people are friendly, emotional, temperamental, worried, frequently deceived by Moscow propaganda, groping to find the true facts. They have been under a dictatorship both under the Czars and under the Kremlin, and, when they come in touch with the western world—either in New York, Vienna or Berlin—they crave more contact with forbidden western capitalism.

'Offending the Russians'

3. Remember also that the only way to treat Russian bureaucrats is to "offend" them. Molotov uses offensive tacts continually because that's the language he understands. Therefore, let's "offend" them where it really hurts. For instance:

(a) We lent Russia 100 ships outside of lend-lease. When those ships put into United States ports, let's attach them until we get payment.

(b) We sold hydroelectric equipment for the Dnieper River Dam, still unpaid for. We are suffering a $1,500,000-a-day loss as a result of the Berlin blockade and the airlift. Until those amounts are paid, let's increase the tolls through the Panama Canal for every Russian ship. If the present charge for one ship is $5000, increase it to $500,000 per ship. The British can do the same at Suez.

(c) Demand distribution of American films, magazines and newspapers in Russia exactly equal to the distribution of Russian propaganda in the United States.

'Comic Books to Russia'

4. Meanwhile, let's "offend" the Russian bureaucrats by getting the truth across to the Russian people. Propaganda balloons to Russia are only one small way of telling the Russian people that the American people are not what the Kremlin says we are. Here are some other ways:

(a) Several hundred thousand Red army troops are just across the street from us in both Berlin and Vienna. Germans, passing back and forth every day, could easily distribute United States propaganda. There is nothing like comic books to tell a friendly propaganda story.

(b) Western seamen, touching at Russian ports, can get propaganda ashore. Norwegian, Swedish seaman did a great job along this line during the war, aren't being used today.

(c) It's fairly easy to get propaganda inside Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Austria, Finland. From there it's an easy step into Russia proper. Plenty of Czechs, Poles, Austrians, etc., would be only too glad to cooperate.

These are just a few random ideas which, as one citizen, I can't help expressing and worrying about, as the U. S. A. and the U. S. S. R. drift nearer and nearer a grave and tragic impasse.

However, beginning tomorrow, I am going to quit worrying I'm going to leave the problems of the world to Robert S. Allen, who will call the tunes on the Washington Merry-Go-Round.
